BOAT CREWS READY FOR START

Why You Should Order To-morrow's 'American' To-day

The fleets of Togo and Rojestvensky are within a few miles of each other in the Korean Straits. The greatest sea battle in the world's history may already have been fought. The Czar to-morrow may feel like the Monarch described by Lord Byron:

A king sat on the rocky brow
Which looks o'er sea-born Salamis;
And ships, by thousands, lay below,
And men in nations—all were his!
He counted them at break of day—
And when the sun set, where were they?

In to-morrow's SUNDAY AMERICAN you may find the answer to this question, on which the fate of an empire depends. With its special correspondents and the special cable service of the Hearst newspapers, the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will be in a position to give you the best story of that sea fight—if it occurs.

But in that case so many people will want the paper that unless you order it to-day or get up early to-morrow you won't be able to buy one.

* * *

Everybody also will want to read the story of that other battle on the water, the contest between the Harvard and Cornell crews, which 150,000 persons view to-day from the banks of the Charles River.

Julian Hawthorne, the author, will write the story of this race for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

* * *

Governor Douglas, who started in life without money and having made a fortune became Governor, and who now declines a re-nomination, will tell young men in the AMERICAN to-morrow How to Succeed in Life.

One of the first rules of success is to seize opportunity before another man takes it from you. The time to begin is now—by ordering a copy of the paper containing this article by Governor Douglas.

* * *

Julia Ward Howe—the most marvellous woman in America—is eighty-six years old to-day. Thirty-nine years ago she wrote the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," the echoes of which will never cease to be heard around the world. Now, at eighty-six, she has written another poem, one which future generations will rank with that most famous battle hymn.

She has given it to the BOSTON AMERICAN, and it will be printed exclusively in this newspaper to-morrow.

* * *

This will be the outing number of the SUNDAY AMERICAN—another reason why everybody will want to read it, and therefore why you should order your own particular copy of the paper before your newsdealer's supply is exhausted.

COUNTING TECH MERGER BALLOT

Ballots on which the alumni and past students of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology are to vote upon the proposed merger with Harvard University are being returned to the alumni committee to-day. There are some 6,500 graduates of the institute, and all of them, so far as possible, were supplied with the blank ballots. It is expected that a majority of those to whom the ballots were sent will vote. The ballots are being counted in room 44, Rogers Building, by three young women, under the supervision of Professor Robbins.

No information regarding the wishes of the alumni, as represented by the ballots already received, will be given out until June 1, when the result of the balloting will be made public.

VETO BY WOBURN MAYOR.

Mayor Lawrence Reade of Woburn has vetoed the order of the city government of Woburn, calling for a $7,500 fire house for the city. This is done on the grounds of economy, and the belief that the city will not suffer without the new house. The order will go back to the Board of Aldermen with the street lighting veto.

REPORT BIG SHIPS IN FIGHT

Tokio Dispatch Indicates the Probability of Naval Engagement.

RUSSIANS IN KOREA STRAIT

TOKIO, May 27.—A great sea battle between the Russian and Japanese fleets is roprted raging in Korean Straits, south of Ma-san-pho, where Togo has been reported for several days.

Officials believe that Rojestvensky attempted to rush the Korean Straits with his united fleet, and that Togo accepted battle.

There is as yet no official confirmation of the report, but it is officially credited, and details are expected momentarily.

LONDON, May 27.—Dispatches to the Reuter Telegram Company from Tokio state that Admiral Rojestvensky has been reported off Tsu Shima, in Korea Straits, thirty miles from Ma-san-pho, where Togo has been reported.

LONDON EXPERTS THINK BATTLE IS BEING FOUGHT

LONDON, May 27.—Reports that the Russian and Japanese fleets have met in what is expected to prove the greatest sea battle in history are accepted here as correct. Details are anxiously awaited. There seems little doubt, according to naval experts, that Togo has finally brought the battle to a place of his own choosing, and when Rojestvensky attempted to smash a way through the Korean Straits for Vladivostok, Togo accepted battle.

The report that Rojestvensky is in the Korean straits occasioned great surprise. It indicates decided boldness, and is a challenge to the Japanese to fight in their own waters. The inactivity of Admiral Togo up to this point has caused astonishment, and there are some who incline to the old view that he still intends to permit Rojestvensky to reach Vladivostok in the belief that he has a better chance to destroy the Russian fleet by a duplication of his Port Arthur program, than by a decisive battle on the high seas. Rojestvensky, divining this, may have decided to force a battle rather than be caught in a trap at Vladivostok.

Reports have rarely come from Tokio. When they have come they have later proven to be correct, hence England and Europe attach more importance to this Tokio report of a battle than to any that has been current in the past.

BLAIR LOOKS FOR A CLOSE RACE

By E. J. Blair,
Manager of the Cornell Crew.

I hope, of course, that Cornell will win, but as I have not seen the Harvard crew row it would be impossible for me to express my opinion as to which is the better crew. Cornell is in fit condition to put up the race of their lives, and if they lose it will be because Harvard is the faster. I look for a close race.

KING OSCAR DEFIES THE NORWEGIANS

Refuses to Sign Bill for Separate Consular Service and Ministers Resign.

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, May 27.—King Oscar at to-day's session of the Council of Ministers refused to sign the law creating a separate consular system for Norway. The Ministers at once offered their resignations, but the King declined to accept them.

The situation in the dispute between Norway and Sweden is acute.

NORWAY GETTING READY FOR WAR, LONDON HEARS

LONDON, May 27.—The Christiania correspondent of the Daily Express sends a sensational story of alleged secret warlike preparations at all strategic points on the Norwegian frontier for the purpose of meeting possibilities in connection with the dispute between Sweden and Norway on the question of separate consular representation.

BUNCO MAN IS GIVEN A YEAR

Charles Nason, forty-two years old, without an address, but who has many aliases, was sentenced to the House of Correction at Deer Island for one year by Judge Bennett in the Municipal Court to-day.

The charge against Nason is working a "bunco" game by inducing persons looking for positions to give him money on the pretext that he will get them jobs.

Nason has served time in New York and Philadelphia, and eight months ago was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction.

Vermont Supreme Court Denies New Trial.

MRS. ROGERS TO HANG

DOOMED WOMAN MUST NOW PREPARE FOR EXECUTION ON FRIDAY.

Special to the Boston American.

MONTPELIER, Vt., May 27.—Mrs. Mary Rogers must hang on June 2, six days from to-day.

The Supreme Court to-day handed down a decision denying the petition of Mrs. Rogers for a new trial. It is the last step which can be taken to save the life of the woman who nearly three years ago murdered her husband that she might be free to marry another man.

Attorneys Senter and Moloney, who argued for a new trial on the grounds that there was insanity in Mrs. Rogers's family, have given up the fight.

"We shall take no further steps; it would be useless," they said.

Governor Bell, who on the day before the date on which Mrs. Rogers was sentenced to be hanged granted her a reprieve to June 2, has said that he will not again interfere.

EVERY APPEAL IS VAIN.

The State of Vermont has set its hand firmly on the life of Mrs. Rogers. Three times has the Legislature been appealed to in an effort to save the woman from death on the gallows.

The Legislators have refused to abolish the death penalty. That was the first step that was taken in behalf of the woman. Then they were appealed to by her lawyers, by women from all parts of the country, exhorted by impassioned orators to at least commute her sentence to life imprisonment. This also they refused.

As a last step they were asked to appoint a commission of physicians who should examine Mrs. Rogers's mental and physical condition and report whether she should be hanged. This the lawmakers likewise refused.

The highest court in the state has decided that Mrs. Rogers had a fair trial, that she was justly convicted, and that it would be against justice and law to grant her a new trial.

GOVERNOR BELL IMMOVABLE.

Above all these there is one man to whom the pleaders for Mrs. Rogers's life have turned before, Governor Bell. In the face of the most powerful arguments which were ever made to a Vermont chief executive, Governor Bell decided before that he could not interfere, save on one ground, that of newly discovered evidence. It was on this plea that he granted the reprieve when he was told that the fact that Mrs. Rogers was insane could be proven.

Governor Bell has announced that he would be turning aside the will of the people if he stepped in and saved this woman's life.

"I shall not go against the will of the State," he declared.

There is a warrant in the hands of the Superintendent of the State Prison at Windsor, which says that he shall have the custody of Mary A. Rogers until Friday, June 2, 1905. On that date he shall give her into the custody of Sheriff Henry H. Peck, who is commanded to see that the sentence of the Court, passed upon Mary Rogers, shall be carried out.

MUST PREPARE FOR DEATH.

In her cell at Windsor the officials have endeavored to prepare Mrs. Rogers for the fate which the Supreme Court decided for her to-day. It was felt by all concerned that the decision would be against the woman. She had been holding to her reprieve cheerfully, and was confident that the last decision would be in her favor.

They had gently hinted to her that it was unlikely that the Supreme Court would interfere and that she should be prepared for the worst.

Mrs. Rogers, however, refused to accept even such a gentle preparation for the blow which must be dealt her when the official announcement is made that there will be no further interference with the sentence which was imposed upon her when the jury found her guilty of the wilful murder of her husband.

Again the preparations for the execution of this woman will have to be made at the Windsor Prison. Once more Mrs. Rogers, from the death cell where she will be placed within a day or two, will listen to the noise made by carpenters as they erect the gallows.

She will hear the sheriff when he comes with his assistants and tests the drop and the strength of the rope which is to be used.

HAD BEEN VERY CONFIDENT.

Once more Mrs. Rogers will have the death watch placed over her, the watch that is with her day and night and which is commanded to see that she makes no effort to end her life. She has seven whole days in which to ponder on these things.

When she was compelled to pass through this ordeal before the woman was brave. She made no trouble for anyone. She was confident that there would come to her a reprieve, perhaps a commutation of her sentence.

"They will not hang me," she has said time and again. She firmly believes that the State, which only once before has taken the life of a woman, will not do it again.

Almost everyone in Vermont knows

BOSTON MAY AID STRIKERS IN CHICAGO

Business Agent Barry Coming East and May Urge Sympathetic Strike.

Boston teamsters are awaiting the arrival of James B. Barry, business agent of the Chicago Express Drivers' Union, who is understood to be coming here to raise money and discuss the question of assisting the Chicago strikers.

Business Agent James A. Duffy of the Boston local told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter that the Boston union had under consideration the question of refusing to handle goods for those houses which are fighting the Chicago teamsters.

"There is no talk of a sympathetic strike," declared Mr. Duffy. "We are simply considering whether we ought to handle goods of those companies which are fighting the union in Chicago, even though we have no grievance here."

In Chicago it is understood that Business Agent Barry has gone to New York and Boston with the idea of enlisting the express drivers in a sympathetic strike movement, which would tie up the entire railway express system. President Shea, however, declared that Barry's sole object was to raise funds for the union.

EMPLOYERS MAKE BITTER ATTACK ON PRESIDENT SHEA

In an attempt to show that President Cornelius P. Shea, former Boston man, head of the National Teamsters' Union, had been concerned in some "grave affair" in the vicinity of Somerville and North Cambridge less than a year ago, Levi Mayer, attorney for the Employers' Association, which is fighting the striking teamsters of Chicago, asked Shea in the strike investigation as to his whereabouts during the past year, say Chicago dispatches to the BOSTON AMERICAN.

To all the attorney's leading questions President Shea answered promptly, denying that he knew the men whom Mayer intimated were graduates of prisons or even now confined for public safety.

Lieutenant Carter of the Somerville police declares that he knows Shea well; that he was arrested in 1899, charged with the larceny of money from Andrew Gormully, but the case was nol prossed. During the Boston teamsters' strike six years ago Shea took a conspicuous part.

UNIDENTIFIED BODY TAKEN FROM HARBOR

The badly decomposed body of a man was taken from the water near the Commonwealth docks by the harbor police to-day. The body is five feet six inches long, weighs 170 pounds, and is clothed in a dark suit, white and blue striped shirt, turned down collar, four-in-hand tie and a new pair of shoes. The body was removed to Briggs's undertaking rooms, where the medical examiner will view the remains.

VAST CROWD SEES HARVARD CORNELL CONTEST

Fine Weather Conditions for Rowing Battle on the Charles This Afternoon.

Special to the Boston American.

LONGWOOD BRIDGE, Boston, May 27.—If the weather conditions had been made to order they couldn't have been more suitable to the Harvard and Cornell varsity eights who contested for rowing honors this afternoon on the Charles River.

The river was as smooth as glass, and not a sign of a ripple was seen except when some oarsman splashed his oars.

Old Sol looked with favor on the struggling crews and gladdened their hearts by shining with warm rays. However, he hid behind the murky clouds once in a while by way of showing the value of his presence.

Gay Scenes Along River.

The river banks presented a most brilliant sight. Thousands upon thousands of gaily dressed women in Summer attire lined both the Cambridge and Boston shores.

The largest crowd naturally collected at the finish at the Longwod bridge. So large was the crowd at this point that strict police order was necessary. The stand, which was built at angles with Longwood bridge, was over-taxed with an excited mass of humanity. This bleacher was built in two sections, and faced the mark where the opposing crews went skimming across. At the starting place another big crowd was on hand who lent its vocal support to the oarsmen as they prepared for the start.

All the residences along Bay State road, where live many of Boston's ultra-fashionable, were used for the purpose of viewing the race by all those lucky enough to own, or have friends who did.

Crowd Along Shore.

The railing fencing of the Bay State road from the water was also thronged with rowing fans, who craned their necks, some twenty deep to get a peep at the embryo Togos and Rojestvenskys of collegiate rowing circles.

The opposite bank, known as Charles River road, also served as a reviewing stand.

It was really a splendid spectacle to see two shores crowded with people, two crews racing for high aquatic honors, with the glory of victory dearer to them than all the laurels of a business or professional world.

The Harvard launch towed the Crimson eight "who sat by their oars" long before the race. The Cambridge lads looked filled with determination, as though they were to conquer the Ithacans at all hazards.

The Cornell crews had their shell at the Union Boat house and so lost an opportunity to gain plaudits from the crowds.

The United States revenue cutter, Winnisemmet patrolled the course, along with the police boat, and kept all craft, except those with official privileges, from interfering with progress of the shells.

At the Finish.

A string of some eight row boats marked off the finish, and all boats had to keep outside. However, many enthusiasts took advantage of this spot and crowded every available inch with their craft. So thick were they that a person could have stepped from one to the other.

SPECIAL BOAT RACE EDITION.

A special edition of the BOSTON AMERICAN containing the story of the big Harvard-Cornell race will be issued this afternoon immediately after the race.

In to-morrow's SUNDAY AMERICAN the race will be described by experts and by the best writers in Boston.

Women Snap Wild Animals With Camera

What an idea, you say, to shoot wild animals and savage beasts with a camera instead of with a gun. But it is done and in their native wilds, too. No tame hunting for wild beasts in cages at the zoo for some people. Some of the most successful hunting pictures have been made by women, and some really remarkable ones will be printed in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. One of them is a snap shot of hunting dogs rounding up a mountain lion—now what do you think of that?

The Real Home Life of the Czar's Children.

Even though they do live in a palace so vast that it has fifteen hundred rooms, and in one of them stands a mountain down which they toboggan when their fancy turns to sport, the little grand duchesses play with each other and act very much like other children, in spite of their surroundings. The story is told by Miss M. Eager, formerly a member of the Czarina's household as governess of the four little Russian princesses.

A Baby Dinosaur Ten Million Years Old.

It is not necessary to be too precise as to the exact date of his birth, but he was born somewhere around 9,998,095 B. C. His parents were the biggest creatures that ever walked the earth, but this baby's skeleton, which was dug up the other day in Maryland, is only eight feet long, and the youngster in life probably did not weigh quite so much as the average horse. They have stuck a model of him up alongside the tail of what might possibly be his father's skeleton in a New York museum, and you can read all about him and his folks in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

The Call of the Country.

Does the city stifle you? Do you tire of walking between walls of brick and stone, with only a patch of blue sky overhead? Do you ever hunger for the fresh air far from city smoke and for the pleasures that are only to be gained in the country or by the sea? Then you wil be interested in the thoughts of the Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., on the "Call of the Country."

Hunting, Fishing and Photographing the Depths of the Ocean.

There are all kinds of strange things down at the bottom of the sea, and for that matter at all depths between its oozy bed and the waves which crest its surface. You will be interested in reading how ingenious new inventions have opened up the very mysteries of the deep and enabled us to study and snapshot curious creatures at the bottom of the sea.

How Mexico Fights the Yaqui Rebellion.

The Yaquis down in Mexico are one of the fiercest peoples in the world and are very obstinate in desiring to lead their lives in their own way. Mexico is having a hard time controlling them. Large areas have been depopulated in the effort to stamp out the fight for independence waged by the Indians, and an American miner interested in rich gold discoveries is said to be their real leader.

The Kaiser's New Mile-a-Minute Yacht.

How is that for speed. Seems impossible, doesn't it? But there is a German inventor in this country who has been experimenting, and Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany has just ordered an auto boat from his designs that is expected to do the trick. It will be built in this country. The story of the inventor's experiments you will find worth reading.

The Tragedy of a Ferris Wheel.

How two merry-making high school girls in California were dashed to earth from the top of the wheel by the breaking of one little bolt in their car.

What My Lady Wears When She Goes in for Sports.

The smart women pay as much attention to outing costumes as to ball dresses. Mrs. Osborn, creator of fashions for the fashionable women of America, describes and illustrates the different suits for golf, tennis, hunting, riding, walking and swimming.

The Funniest Comic Section in the Universe.

Anyway, no one can prove that it isn't, for there are no mails between this orb and Mars or any other sphere out in space, and there is no question but that the great Comic Section of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN is the funniest on earth.

Woman Artist a Prisoner in Paris, Guarded by Soldiers.

Why Mlle. Marcelle Rondenay, whose Salon picture has created a sensation, must spend six weeks locked up alone in a studio and closely guarded by soldiers, while competing for the greatest art prize offered by France.

Burst Into Flames and Died.

The story of the tragic death of the famous Spanish beauty, Senorita Mercedes de Cortejon, while posing as Bacchante in the carnival parade.

Articles of Interest to Women.

None can write so interestingly for women as women themselves. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Dorothy Dix, Winifred Black and Mrs. Osborn write exclusively for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

More Magic Pictures for the Children.

The magic pictures made a sensation last Sunday. There will be some more in the Magazine Section that will afford no end of amusement for the children.

MARTIAL LAW IN WARSAW; PROPERTY DESTROYED BY MOBS

WARSAW, May 27.—Martial law has been proclaimed in this city. Six thousand troops have just arrived from their Summer encampment. Order has been restored.

Patrols of Cossacks and infantry twice fired on the crowds, charged and dispersed them. Nineteen persons were wounded and fifty arrests were made. Three more persons died in the hospitals of wounds received Wednesday night.

Jews and Christians joined hands to obliterate vicious resorts. They not only wrecked the interior of houses where anyone was welcome, but they broke into apartments where women have dwelt under aristocratic protection. These women had fled and are in hiding, so no personal violence was necessary. But the mob destroyed costly furniture and clothing.

The services celebrating the coronation of the Czar in Moscow nine years ago will be held in the private chapel of the castle to-day, instead of in the cathedral as usual. The police urged this change; they believe the Terrorists have planned to make another attack with bombs on Governor-General Maximovitch while he is going to or coming from the cathedral.

COMBAT TO SETTLE SEA SUPREMACY

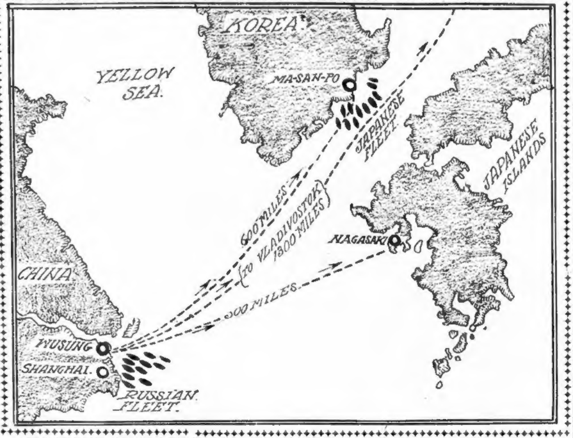
Late on Thursday night a part of the Russian squadron put in at Wusung, ten miles north of Shanghai. Early yesterday another section of the fleet arrived, hurriedly took on stores, and then, in response to the Chinese demand, enforced by the clearing of the decks of Chinese vessels for action, these two parts of the combined Russian fleet are reported to have sailed away north.

These facts are authentic. Now it is presumed that Rojestvensky sent in several of his vessels for stores, and with the main fighting fleet steamed straight for the Korean passage to Vladivostok. He has been daring Togo to battle for weeks; the failure of Togo to accept this challenge led Rojestvensky, it is now declared, to attempt to rush the Korean Straits.

For several days Togo had been reported at Ma-san-pho, which is only thirty miles or a fraction less from the point where the Reuter Telegram Company to-day reports Rojestvensky, Tsu-Shima. If this part of the Russian division is in the Straits, nothing could avert a battle, naval men declare, hence the general belief that one is now raging.

Tsingtau adds another interest to the situation in the Korean Straits by a statement that the Vladivostok squadron has sailed south. This may mean that Rojestvensky will attempt to bear in on the Japanese fleet from north and south. If the battle is now on, however, it will probably be ended before the Vladivostok squadron could reach the scene.



POSITIONS OF RUSSIAN AND JAP FLEETS AS REPORTED YESTERDAY.

On the night of May 25 part of the Russian fleet arrived at Wusung, north of Shanghai. It is presumed that the fleet left there after a few hours and that would have given time for the fastest of the Russian ships to have reached the Korean Straits, where Tokio reports that a sea battle is now raging. It is presumed this is just south of Na-san-po, which is less than thirty miles from Tsu Shima, Korean Straits, where Rojestvensky is reported to-day.

SIGHTS 45 RUSSIAN WARSHIPS HEADING FOR BATTLE ZONE

HONG KONG, May 27.—The British steamer St. Kilda reports having sighted, early Wednesday, forty-five Russian vessels, including battleships, cruisers, torpedo boat destroyers, colliers, a hospital ship and tugs, 140 miles south-southeast of the Saddle Islands. The Russians were heading in a north-northwesterly direction.

COSSACKS BEATEN IN SKIRMISH WITH JAPANESE CAVALRY

TOKIO, May 27.—The following statement was issued from the Imperial Army headquarters to-day:

"On May 25 our cavalry in driving a body of Russian cavalry northeastward occupied Hsumiencheng, eighteen miles north of Changtu. Otherwise, with the exception of small collisions between detached parties on both sides, the situation is unchanged."

RUSSIAN OFFICER MAKES SENSATIONAL SPEECH AT BANQUET

WARSAW, May 27.—At a banquet given by Baron Korff, Governor of Somza, to officers ordered from Somza to the Far East, the Baron delivered an address urging the officers, after defeating the Japanese, to return and exterminate Russia's internal enemies. The instant Baron Korff finished speaking one of the officers arose and created a sensation by saying:

"When we will return we will not follow Baron Korff's advice. He is trying to urge us to fight against the workingmen. It is not the workingmen, but the bureaucrats who are the real enemies of Russia. Our poor and oppressed fellow-Russians cannot harm Russia; her welfare is endangered by those who wear uniforms similar to that of Baron Korff."

Baron Korff ordered that the officer be placed under arrest and court-martialled.

SAYS ROOSEVELT PRAISED CHINESE FOR PROMPT ACTION

LONDON, May 27.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Express says:

"President Roosevelt has wired the Viceroy of Shanghai commending his steps in enforcing the neutrality of China."

This dispatch followed a dispatch yesterday from the same correspondent in which he said:

"All the Chinese cruisers in these waters cleared for action to-day and the Taotai went to the Russian consulate and demanded that the Russian ships leave within twenty-four hours."

St. Petersburg sends a report that the Czar will send to President Roosevelt a precise history of the Russo-Japanese war and its causes. In this he will assure the President that Russia attempted in every way possible to avoid war. Baron Rosen, the new Ambassador to the United States, will hand this to the President on his arrival.

RUSSIANS REPORT SUCCESSFUL RAID BY THE CAVALRY

ST. PETERSBURG, May 27.—News of a successful cavalry raid by Lieutenant-General Mistchenko comes in the following dispatch from General Linevitch to the Emperor, dated May 25:

"A cavalry detachment commanded by Lieutenant-General Mistchenko, composed of a portion of the South Caucasian Brigade and Trans-Baikal Cossacks, while engaged May 17 in repulsing the enemy to the southward, approached Sinluntchouan. On May 18 squadrons of the vanguard succeeded in reaching the Fakuman road, where they burned a stores depot and destroyed the telegraph for a considerable distance. Large bands of Chinese bandits encountered by the detachment were partly annihilated and partly dispersed."

ROJESTVENSY IS ALREADY LAUDED AS RUSSIAN HERO

ST. PETERSBURG, May 27.—Accepting at its face value the report that Rojestvensky has sailed into the Korean Straits, and that a battle is raging between the Russian and Japanese fleets, this city is intensely excited. There seems little question that the report of Rojestvensky being at Tsu Shima is correct. Naval officials declare if the battle is not on it must come within a few hours, else Togo will be compelled to give the Russians a path to Vladivostok, admitting his fighting inferiority.

Rojestvensky is now being heroized for his daring in going straight after Togo. His admirers here point out that he is a great believer in strategy and mystification, and his cruise in the Pacific may have been not only to avoid the danger of mines and torpedo boat attacks in the shallow waters of the straits of Formosa, but to deceive the Japanese into the belief that his objective was either the Tsugaru or La Perouse Straits, while in reality he changed his course and headed for the Straits of Korea.

FIGHTS VAINLY TO KEEP HUSBAND FROM SUICIDE

MRS. MANCINI BRUISED FROM HEAD TO FOOT IN STRUGGLE TO GET REVOLVER.

Mrs. Beatrice Mancini, after her frightful struggle with her trouble-crazed husband in their locked room at No. 127 Warren avenue, which only ended when he had torn one arm free from her embrace and sent a bullet crashing into his brain, is prostrated to-day at the home of relatives.

Not only from grief at the terrible end of her husband of a month, and of nervous shock at the manner of his death is she suffering, but she bears, from head to foot, bruises that testify to the violence of the struggle she had with him in trying to prevent him from carrying out his threat to kill himself.

For more than twenty minutes husband and wife struggled for the possession of the revolver that Mancini had bought with the proceeds of a pawned suit of clothes. They had fought about the room and onto the bed, and both were struggling there when he wrested his right arm free and instantly shot himself.

Long Fight for the Revolver.

Ever since she had discovered the revolver in his pocket as he sat down to write a farewell note to his sister in Providence, R. I., the fight for the revolver had lasted, with one or two breathing spells. While he continued to pen his note she, distraught with horror and fear, strove to invent some strategy to dispossess him of the deadly weapon.

Mrs. Mancini told a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day, that she felt sure her husband was insane. He had sought for work without success. They had no money. He had become disheartened and morose. Then, to put a climax to his woes, he received yesterday a letter containing his discharge from Company A of the First Light Infantry, the fashionable independent military command of Providence, "for the good of the service." This, Mrs. Mancini says, was the last straw that drove her husband to his death.

When other lodgers in the house, roused by the shot and Mrs. Mancini's screams, ran into the room, they found him lying on the floor. He was unconscious, but still alive. The blood was pouring from the wounds.

His girl wife was sitting on the floor, her dying husband's head in her lap. She was wearing the dress that she wore when they were married at Young's Hotel on April 24, and it was drenched with his blood. Even after other persons had entered the room she paid no attention to them. She persisted in trying to stop the flow of blood with her dress and trying to rouse the husband who was beyond recall.

Were Devoted to Each Other.

It was only a month ago that the young couple were married. Mancini was the son of a tailor in Providence. His family is well to do, his father having for years made the uniforms for the Providence police force. A month ago he proposed to pretty Beatrice Richardson, who is the daughter of Mrs. John Richardson of Brighton. She accepted him and they were married in Young's Hotel by Assistant City Clerk Farrar.

They left the city on a two weeks' honeymoon and on their return engaged rooms in the Warren avenue house. From all accounts they were devoted to each other. They were seldom apart and seemed very happy.

Then Mancini's funds began to run low. He wrote to his father and several times during the past ten days he had received small remittances from Providence. These were soon exhausted in paying for the rooms and for their meals.

Bride Tried to Cheer Him.

Every day he sought employment, but could find none. Every night he returned to his rooms discouraged, only to be cheered by his bride, who prophesied better luck the next day.

So it went until yesterday. Despondency had gained the upper hand, and when the letter from Providence arrived, telling him that the military company had decided he should not be a member longer, he determined to end his life. He took a suit of clothes and pawned them. With the money he bought a revolver and some cartridges. He returned to his room and sat down to write a letter. His wife saw the revolver in his hip pocket and suspected his intention.

"What are you doing with that revolver?" she asked.

The young husband—he was only twenty—turned and looked at her calmly. "I am going to kill myself," he said.

Then ensued a struggle for the possession of the pistol, in which Mancini's strength was victorious. Mrs. Mancini started to scream.

Threatened to Kill Her.

"If you scream and attract attention I'll kill you and then myself before any one can come," he cried. "And if anybody should come through that door I'll kill them, too."

The door was locked, with the key in it. Mrs. Mancini tried to reach it.

"Sit down," thundered her husband, pointing the revolver at her. "I'm going to kill myself anyway. You'll go, too, if you try to get out of this room."

Then, with the revolver under his left hand, he wrote the letter to his sister, which lay there when the police came later to take charge of his body. It told her he would be dead before she got the letter; that he sent kisses to his father, mother and her; that he hoped God would forgive him for what he was doing; that he would meet them in heaven.

Mancini went to bed, lay down and drew the revolver. His wife threw herself upon him. Already, in the first struggle, she had been bruised and hurt. Now she fought with the strength of desperation to try to get the revolver.

"I'll kill you if you don't stop," he said.

"Kill me, then," she screamed. "Kill me anyway if you are going to kill yourself. I don't want to live without you."

But Mancini didn't take her at her word, and the struggle continued. They had struggled about the bed. Mrs. Mancini's waist was torn. She fought to retain control of his right arm, to prevent his using the revolver. Suddenly he got the arm free with a mighty wrench.

He Succeeds at Last.

Like a flash he put the revolver to his head. There was a report and blood flowed from his mouth and ears. The body rolled from the bed to the floor.

The girl sprang to the door, turned the key and threw the door wide open, screaming for help. Then she returned to her husband. Sitting on the floor she lifted his head to her lap and tried to staunch the flow of blood with her dress.

"Al, come back to me," she pleaded. "Don't leave me. I can't live without you." But her pleadings fell on deaf ears.

When the other lodgers came she had neither eyes nor ears for them. Not for a second did she stop murmuring loving words to the dying man and trying to revive him.

Dr. Francis J. McQueeney of No. 46 Dartmouth street was called. He quickly responded, and after examining the wound ordered Mancini removed to the City Hospital, where he died without regaining consciousness. Sergeant Manning and Patrolman Vincent of the East Dedham Street Station, after questioning Mrs. Mancini and other occupants of the house, made no further investigation.

Mrs. Mancini is twenty years old, and a pronounced and pretty blonde.

She is a clever soprano, and has been seen in several musical companies, the most notable being with Stella Mayhew in "Flo Flo," which was played in Boston last December. Before that time Mrs. Mancini lived with her mother in Brighton. She was at one time employed as a clerk by the Boston Realty Company at No. 179 Tremont street, and has worked in a department store in this city.

Seemed Very Happy Couple.

Mancini's suicide was a great surprise to the occupants of the house who had become acquainted with the couple. Mrs. Nathan Johnson, who has known Mrs. Mancini for several years, said the act of Mancini was a great shock to her, and she was unable to account for it.

"They were one of the happiest couples I have ever known, and were devotedly attached to each other," said she.

"They were together constantly. Since they have been married Mr. Mancini has been out of work, and the finances of the young couple have dwindled very fast. He has searched everywhere for a position, willing to accept any kind of work, but without success. During the last few days he has been very quiet and morose and felt his situation very keenly. He and his wife talked about their circumstances a few days ago, and she did all in her power to encourage him."

TO ENFORCE NEW BUILDING LAW

Matthews, Conry and Parkman Named as Commission on Height Under 1905 Statute.

Mayor Collins has appointed, as a commission on the height of buildings under chapter 383, of the Laws of 1905, Nathan Matthews, Joseph A. Conry and Henry Parkman.

These same gentlemen were appointed a commission bearing the same name in June, 1904, and at that time divided the city into two classes known as districts A and B, in the former allowing buildings to be erected 125 feet high and in the latter district limiting the height to eighty feet.

This year the law has been amended and a new commission is provided for to further revise the height of structures in District B. Under the provisions of the present statute the commission may provide that certain sections may have buildings from 80 to 100 feet in height, and may fix the conditions under which they may be constructed.

The law further provides that within the following limits the height of seventy feet must not be exceeded: Beginning on Beacon street at the corner of Hancock avenue, then west on Beacon street to Joy, then north on Joy to Myrtle, then east on Myrtle to Hancock, thence on Hancock street and avenue to the place of beginning.

SHOT MAN FOR NAGGING WIFE

LOWELL, May 27.—Avides Mavarian, aged twenty-five, put three bullets into Oscar Ohasabian, aged forty-five, in Mavarian's fruit store, Gorham street, at 11:15 to-day. The wounded man is now hovering between life and death at St. John's Hospital. Mavarian has been captured, and admits the shooting.

Ohasabian, who is a grocer, was engaged in argument over a debt with Mavarian's wife, when the latter pulled a revolver from the money drawer and fired.

MANCINI'S WEALTHY FATHER WAS READY TO SEND HIM AID

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 27.—Albert E. Mancini, the young Italian who committed suicide in Boston, was the youngest of three children of Thomas Mancini of this city. Mr. Mancini, the elder, is wealthy, and is known throughout the State as the police tailor.

Father and mother of the young man were overcome with emotion when news of their son's death reached them this morning.

"I cannot understand why Albert should have killed himself," said Mr. Mancini when seen at his shop on Atwell's avenue by a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "He knew that we were perfectly reconciled to his marriage, and that he could always rely upon us to help him in any financial difficulty. Why it was only about two days ago that I sent him money. I had previously sent him a remittance.

"He first met the young woman whom he married when she was down here on a vacation visit about two years back. When she returned to Boston they corresponded. When he left for Boston last month he gave no intimation of his intention to be married.

"When we received word from him that he had been married and was happy we immediately wrote congratulating him, as his happiness was all that we desired, although we regretted that he did not take us into his confidence. We heard from him again a few days ago when he wrote saying that he was discouraged because he could not obtain work. We then sent him money."

MRS. ROGERS MUST HANG COURT SAYS

something of the history of Mary Rogers. She was at the time of the murder but twenty-two years of age and the mother of one child. She was married to Marcus M. Rogers, a farmhand at Hoosick, N. Y., when she was sixteen years of age.

LURED TO HIS DEATH.

Mrs. Rogers had left her husband and gone to Bennington, Vt., in August, 1902. She worked at several places and while boarding with a family named Perham she fell in love with a man named Morris Knapp. She wanted to marry him. Her husband stood in the way.

One night Marcus Rogers received word from his wife. She wanted him to come to Bennington. He had asked her many times to return to him and he believed that she was about to do so. When he received her letter he promptly met her at the time designated by his wife.

When he found her she was accompanied by Leon Perham, said at his trial to be half-witted. They had brought along a bottle of chloroform and a clothesline. It was by a bridge over the Waloomsac river that they met.

Mrs. Rogers was apparently glad to see her husband. They sat down on the bank, he and his wife and Leon Perham. She showed Rogers the clothesline and she and the youth tied it around him and laughed when he released himself.

They made him enter into the spirit of the game. They told him to keep quiet so they could tie him as tightly as possible and then see if he could release himself. Marcus Rogers consented and lay still while the rope was wound round his arms and his legs and tied in a dozen knots. He was helpless on the ground.

PUT NOTE IN HIS HAT.

Then Mrs. Rogers carefully poured the chloroform over her handkerchief and held it to her husband's face. He struggled, but her hand kept the cloth in place. He ceased to breath and when the cloth was removed he was either dead or unconscious.

Mrs. Rogers and Leon Perham untied the rope and together they rolled the body of her husband into the river.

Before leaving the spot Mrs. Rogers wrote a note which she placed in her husband's hat. This note read:

"I am going to drown myself, as I am tired of living. Nobody but myself is to blame for my death."

Mrs. Rogers did not wait for her husband's body to be found. Instead she reported that he had promised to meet her and had not come. She feared that some harm had come to him.

ALL THREE INDICTED.

They found the body of Marcus Rogers and became suspicious. Mrs. Rogers made efforts to collect the $500 insurance which he carried. She made visits to a furniture store and priced articles of furniture, as she intended going to housekeeping.

The State went to work. They found that Estella Bates, a sixteen-year-old friend of Mrs. Rogers, had purchased the chloroform. They found also that Marcus Rogers had not died from drowning, but from suffocation. The arrests of Mrs. Rogers, Leon Perham and the Bates girl followed. Young Perham make frank confession, described how Mrs. Rogers had lured him to help in the deed and just how they had done it.

All three were indicted. The Bates girl was never tried, as the authorities were convinced that she knew not to what use the drug was to be put when she purchased it at the request of Mrs. Rogers.

Mrs. Rogers and Perham were tried and convicted. Perham was given life imprisonment. Mrs. Rogers was sentenced to die on February 3, 1905.

Some months before her death agitation was begun to have the woman spared. No stone was left unturned. Every recourse known to the best legal talent in Vermont was tried. All failed and the Governor of the State has stood firmly for the upholding of the law.

WINS DIVORCE IN NEWPORT

NEWPORT, May 27.—The last act of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court was the granting of a divorce, with the custody of their twelve-year-old boy, to Pauline Onativia Townsend, wife of John R. Townsend, the New York clubman, on the ground of non-support.

The case was heard Monday, but the Justice wished further time to consider Mrs. Townsend's residence here during the last two years, which she claimed, and which has since been proved to the satisfaction of the Court.

Mrs. Townsend is a handsome woman, and as a young woman was considered one of the most attractive in society. Mr. Townsend is a nephew of Edward N. Tailer and a cousin of T. Suffern Tailer, Mrs. Sydney J. Smith, Mrs. H. I. Burnett and Mrs. Robert R. Livingston.

During her residence here Mrs. Townsend has been seen little, save driving about with her son.

TELEPHONE FROM ROME TO PARIS

ROME, May 27.—In a few weeks the French and Italian capitals will be directly united by telephone. A preliminary connection having been made, Angelini, chief of the Italian telegraph department, rang up Gaston Calmette, editor of the Paris Figaro. After an exchange of compliments Angelini invited the Parisians to listen to some Italian music. He then adjusted a phonograph to the telephone, and the music of "Traviata," played in Rome, was heard distinctly in Paris.

CLAIMED RIGHT TO PUNISH WIFE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., May 27.—William T. Letts defiantly maintained the right of a husband to punish his wife for disobedience when he was arraigned in Judge Ferris's Court on the complaint of his wife for cruel treatment.

Mrs. Letts said her husband bound her hands and feet tightly with a cord in their home in Ocean Grove, and locked her in a dark and suffocating closet.

She was afraid to make any outcry, she said, because her husband had threatened to kill her.

Judge Ferris asked Letts why he abused his wife.

"A man has a perfect right to punish his wife if she does not obey him," he said.

"Letts, I will hold you in $300 bail to keep the peace," thundered Judge Ferris.

TO REVISE RAILWAY LAWS DURING RECESS

The following is the Legislative committee appointed to sit during the recess for the purpose of revising the laws relative to street railway and steam railroads: President Dana of the Senate, Senator Cummings of Brookline, Senator Peters of Boston, Senator Munroe of Worcester and Representatives Taft of Worcester, Hayes of Lowell, Pingree of Haverhill, Cole of Andover, Peabody of Cambridge, Schofield of Ipswich, Lowell of Newton, Andrews of Holyoke, Ames of Orange, Davis of Plymouth and Mooney of Boston.

WOMEN'S GUILD TO RUN SWELL CIRCUS

LEOMINSTER, May 27.—The women of Wheeler Guild of the Leominster Hospital Association will hold an amateur circus June 30 and July 1 to raise funds for the hospital. The show will be advertised as the All Paws and Look Circus and will be held in a tent capable of seating 15,000 people.

WOMAN SHOOTS SELF WITH RIFLE

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., May 27.—Mrs. George Drake, aged thirty-six, shot herself through the heart with a Flobert rifle today, dying instantly. She had been despondent through illness.

POPE RECEIVES BISHOP.

ROME, May 27.—Bishop Donahue of Wheeling, W. Va., was received in special audience by the Pope to-day. Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia is also expected at the Vatican.

MURDER WITNESS DIES IN ALMSHOUSE

LYNN, May 27.—Bessie McDonald, the only person in Massachusetts who knows who shot John J. Tucker, the man who was murdered at the corner of Railroad avenue and Washington street in March, 1904, is dead at the State Almshouse in Tewksbury. Her death will prove a severe blow to the prosecution, should the police ever apprehend the suspected persons and bring them to trial.

HARVARD AND CORNELL CREWS RACE TO-DAY

BY CHARLES E. COURTNEY.

Coach of the Cornell Crew.

I cannot say that I expect Cornell to win from Harvard this afternoon. I hope they do, of course, but in case not it will be purely because Harvard has the better crew of the two. Cornell will have no chance to cry "we were not in condition" or something of that kind, for we are as fit as could be desired. Rough water will be against us, therefore, I am praying for a course as smooth as a mill pond. May the best crew win.

BY O. D. FILLEY.

Captain of the Harvard Crew.

You may be sure our crew will row its best race, but outside of that I cannot prognosticate. The boys have been training faithfully ever since they were first called out, and I don't see any reason why they won't give the Ithacans a hard race for the honors. Moreover, the crew is a plucky lot, and you can be assured they will row for dear life all the way. Harvard will surely win, if condition, pluck and endurance count for anything.

Odds at two to one were offered. Harvard men, even at this figure, seemed reluctant to back their crew. A delegation of seventy students from Cornell attended the race. They went begging for bets and seemed disappointed because Harvard men would not snap them up. One fellow said: "Boston 's the closest town I ever saw; you can't even make a bet or "drink up" your own money after 11 o'clock."

Many Bostonians took advantage of the odds offered by the baseball "bookies," who added crew racing to their branch of betting for a day

Expected Good Race.

Although most people thought Cornell would win, they gave Harvard credit for having a better cre wthan last year and believed the Crimsonites would give Charley Courtney's men a grand tussle for the honors.

Courtney's men went into the race, as did Wray's, confident, but not boastful. Neither would venture as to how the test would end. "I have the greatest crew I ever handled," said Coach Wray. "The men are in perfect condition, and if they don't make a good showing I'll be the most surprised man in the world. We're going into this even to win, and you can wager your life that we won't lay down and let the other fellows get the credit."

Captain Filley was non-committal except to say, "We're eager for the fray, and watch for the result."

Changes in Harvard Crew.

Filley has been making all kinds of changes in his shell, and it was only definitely known yesterday to whom he would give seats in the Crimson shell. He has been making all these shifts so the boat would be evenly balanced. He believed it was best to have the right man in the right place. Despite how fine an oarsman he was, if his weight did not suit his place in the shell, he was given his ticket of leave. The race was principally a test of methods.

Cornell Crew Fit.

Coach Courtney would not make much comment before the race. He said his crew was in the best condition and that if they lost he would have no excuses to offer. Captain Filley was not over-confident and thought his men had an even chance with the Ithacans.

Harvard wanted to win this race badly, as in case of victory she could go into the races with Old Eli next month with greater confidence. The men have been working earnestly for the past month or more, in order to get into condition for this race.

There have been many shakeups in the order of the boat, and it has been hard to get a line on the ability of the men.

The men prayed for smooth water, and they got it, as directly before the race there was hardly a ripple to mar the placidity of the river's surface.

Captain Filley and Coach Courtney were afraid that the water would be rough and spoil the chances of their crews making their best showing. However, this was not to be, and as fine a course for racing as was ever offered two rival crews was presented to the members of the Harvard and Cornell boats.

Frank B. Greer, the well-known oarsman, said he never saw a finer set of oarsmen than those of Cornell, and predicts that they will defeat Harvard unless the latter springs a surprise on him.

Cornell lost the race at Poughkeepsie to Syracuse last year, while Harvard was mercilessly beaten by the Blue.

Two hundred and fifty patrolmen and fourteen sergeants, under command of Captain Donavan of Back Bay Station, kept order among the big crowd that has gathered along Back street to witness the Harvard-Cornell boat race. Back street and adjacent streets were roped off and closed to vehicles. Ten patrolmen who are expert oarsmen kept back the fleet of launches, rowboats and other small craft that have crowded along the coarse.

Chief Watts ordered four plain clothes men to mingle with the crowd and keep a sharp eye for pickpockets.

ANDREWS FIELD, Providence, May 27.—Vermont's nine played Brown here today. Vermont has been strong, having won two straight games, but Ruttback, their crack pitcher, has signed with the Chicago Nationals, leaving Davis and Campbell to do the work.

The Green Mountain boys have only lost to Yale, Holy Cross and Bowdoin, and have also won from the last two named, together with Dartmouth and Maine. Tift and Higgins were Brown's battery, and Elrod was given another working out at first.

SPAIN TO BUILD A NEW NAVY

MADRID, May 27.—A plan for the rehabilitation of the Spanish fleet, which has been out a relic of its former self since the Spanish-American war, is to be presented the Cortes. King Alfonso has signified his favor of building up the fleet. The new vessels will be eight cruisers of 14,000 tons, five protected cruisers and numerous other vessels. It is intended to issue bonds to cover the cost of the vessels, which, it is hoped, will be all paid for within six years of completion.

FOUND DEAD WITH $1,000

NEW YORK, May 27.—With $1,000 in silver and bills in his pockets, the body of a man dressed in clothing of the finest quality was found in the river and towed to the dock by an oyster barge. Nothing was on his person that would give the slightest clue to his identity.

An examination by the police showed that the body had been in the water several weeks at least. The clothing was such as would have been worn only in winter weather. There were no marks of violence, and it is thought that the man fell overboard from some steamer.

RAIN SAVES TOWNFROMFIRE

SANDWICH, May 27.—The forest fire which raged in the Sandwich woods until after midnight has been conquered, and with the assistance of rain, which fell this morning, the fire fighters were able to stop it on the Quaker Meeting House road, about daybreak. A tract four miles long and three miles wide was entirely destroyed, including nearly 100 cords of cut wood and approximately 2,000 cords of standing wood. A dozen farms along the northern and the eastern border of the line of fire were in imminent danger at times. The fields caught fire and burned close to the buildings.

How to become a Knight is an easy matter with the mask which is given away with the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN next Sunday. It looks just like the kind you have seen on the armor stand in grandfather's house. Be sure you get one.

WILL ASK FOR IMMIGRATION LEGISLATION

President and Cabinet Consider It the Most Serious Problem of the Day.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—"In my opinion the immigration problem is the most serious that confronts the Government and the people of this country," said Secretary of Commerce and Labor Metcalf. "Its most perplexing feature is the question of distribution.

"Southern States have reported to this department that they could employ many thousands of immigrants there. Within a few days I have received a letter from Louisiana stating that that State alone could give employment to one hundred thousand in the field. I know very well that more men are needed to work the farms of the great West.

Congress Should Act.

"The disposition of nearly all incoming foreigners is to concentrate in the great cities, in their belief that there their fortunes lie. It is this concentration in the cities that makes the problem at once difficult and necessary of immediate solution. The present fiscal year will break all records. It seems to me that it remains for Congress to take some action."

Mr. Metcalf is not the only member of the administration who is becoming alarmed at the situation. President Roosevelt and members of his Cabinet have repeatedly discussed the question, and important recommendations will be made to the incoming Congress.

Three methods of restriction are now under consideration—an increase in the head tax from $2 each to $20 or $25 each; limitation of the number of immigrants from each foreign country and an educational qualification.

Head Tax Feasible.

It is pointed out that of these proposed remedies an increased head tax is the most feasible. In order to limit immigration from foreign countries, it is said, it will be necessary to treat all alike, a difficult solution of the problem. A large percentage of the immigrants to-day are from Austria-Hungary, Italy and Russia.

The educational test would work as a limitation only for a short time, because it is thought by officials here that the steamship companies, which are encouraging immigration, would establish schools abroad to meet requirements. On this account an increase in the head tax is now regarded more seriously than any other proposition yet put forth.

EDUCATION IN CUBA.

"Individual Instruction" was the main topic under discussion at the meeting of the New England Association of School Superintendents in Latin School Hall on Warren avenue. Wilson L. Gill, general superintendent of moral and civic training in the public schools of Cuba under the United States Government, described the work in Cuba and told of the difference between methods here and in the island republic.

TO POSTPONE EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS

President Not Likely to Call Legislators Together Until After the Election.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The President is seriously considering the postponement of the date of the promised extra session of Congress this Fall from the middle of October until a month later. Senator Cullom of Illinois called at the White House to-day, and on leaving the President's office said:

"I do not believe there will be any extra session of Congress until after the Fall elections, and I sincerely hope that there will not be any then."

BROKER FAILS, OWES $24,243

Owing $24,243.19, Edward S. Harris, a broker at No. 189 State street, to-day filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. His assets, consisting mostly of real estate in Hyde Park, are given at $6,531.01. The real estate at No. 15 Dell avenue, Hyde Park, valued at $4,700, is pledged to secure two claims held by the Franklin Five Cents Savings Bank, $3,500, and the Drew Machinery Company of Manchester, N. H., $950.

There are five unsecured creditors of Mystic, Ct., for money loaned, holding aggregating $10,725.

WILL OF MRS. LIVERMORE FILED TO-DAY

The Daughter of Distinguished Woman Leader Is Chief Beneficiary.

The will of Mrs. Mary Ashton Livermore, the distinguished author and woman's suffragist, who died on Tuesday, was filed to-day for probate in the court at East Cambridge. Miss Marcia Elizabeth Hunt Livermore, a daughter, is the chief beneficiary under the will, a trust fund of $25,000 being left in charge of Charles C. Barry of Melrose, who as executor is to "manage, invest and apply the income as directed for the comfort" of Miss Livermore.

If Miss Adelaide Witherington, her companion, remains with Miss Livermore until the latter's death, she is to receive $5,000 from the unexpected balance of the trust fund.

The residue of the trust fund, after the daughter's death, is bequeathed to Mrs. Livermore's other daughter, Henrietta White Norris.

Abby Zebiah Coffin, Mrs. Livermore's sister, is to receive $3,000. The city of Melrose is bequeathed $500 to be used in caring for the Livermore family tomb. All of the residue of the estate goes to Henrietta White Norris, and if she does not survive, to her children.

The will directed that Mrs. Livermore's body be cremated.

GAS TRUST REPUDIATES GAS ORDER

Informs Philadelphia Council That It Will Not Accept Proposed Lease.

PHILADELPHIA, May 27.—Following a meeting of the directors of the United Gas Improvement Company to-day, President Dolan sent a communication to the Select and Common councils announcing that the company would not accept the proposed lease of the plant if it should be ratified.

The lease proposed complete control of gas rights for a term of seventy-five years in payment of $25,000,000 in small installments by the gas company, and is the famous grab measure vetoted by Mayor Weaver, whose action in line with decent government was the greatest blow ever offered the "gang" in this city and which resulted in the wave for public reform that has attracted the attention of the whole country.

18 MILES ON CRUTCHES.

Nearly eighty years old and crippled, John Foley, formerly a wealthy North End resident, walked from the Tewksbury almshouse to Boston, with the aid of crutches. He was found exhausted by a policeman after his eighteen-mile walk at the corner of Prince and Commercial streets. He will be returned to the institution.

MAJESTIC ON FIRE AT PIER IN LIVERPOOL

Flames on the White Star Liner Burn Out the Second Cabins.

LIVERPOOL, May 27.—A fire which started on board the White Star Line steamer Majestic at her pier here to-day, caused considerable excitement. The flames, however, after burning out the second cabins were finally extinguished.

The Majestic, which is commanded by Captain Hayes, arrived here on Thursday last from New York.

The White Star liner Majestic is the second largest of the company's boats in the American service and is a twin-screw steamer. Her gross tonnage is 10,000, and the net tonnage is 4,270. The Majestic is 582 feet over all and 556 feet B. P. Her breadth is fifty-eight feet and her moulded depth is forty-two feet two inches.

MOODY IN CABINET UNTIL JULY 1, 1906

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The retirement from the Cabinet of Attorney-General Moody, which was to have taken place this Summer, has been postponed until July 1, 1906. Mr. Moody originally intended to retire on March 4 last, but subsequently decided to defer the step for several months.

PEOPLE PLEDGE THEIR ALL TO SMASH MACHINE

Angered by Gas Grab, Big Meeting Declares for First American Principles.

BOYCOTT PLACED ON GANG

Resolved, That we, citizens of Philadelphia, without regard to party or politics, do hereby, before God and man, pledge our life, liberty and sacred honor to the complete overthrow of despotic methods in municipal affairs and the restoration of the American principles for which our fathers fought and which shall ever be our glory while we remain worthy to be called their children.—Resolutions adopted last night by citizens' meeting in Philadelphia.

By William Hoster.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

PHILADELPHIA, May 27.—Thousands of the citizens of Philadelphia have joined in the fight led by Mayor Weaver against the gas steal.

An exciting day reached a climax when a big mass meeting was held in the old Academy of Music. The big structure was crowded to the doors, and several thousand who could not gain admittance listened to speeches at overflow meetings. Broad street was crowded. There were policemen every twenty feet. It was like the night of a Presidential election.

The Mayor sent a letter to the meeting regretting that business kept him away. He was hard at work devising new plans to keep the gang on the run. The meeting cheered every mention of his name, and went wild when Mrs. Weaver was discovered in an upper box with a flag in her hand. W. W. Justice, W. T. Tilden and Former Postmaster-General Charles Emory Smith delivered addresses.

In another part of the city the leaders of the organization were in close consultation. The Mayor had struck a fresh blow at them. After a talk with him the new Director of Public Works annulled the advertisements for the street cleaning contract for 1906, bids for which were to be opened on June 1. This contract will be held up a while. It means the withdrawal of a round million dollars of patronage for some favorite of the gang.

Meanwhile the bosses are plotting the wildest kind of reprisals. There is a revival of the talk of the impeachment of the Mayor. A fresh plan to save the ship was formed to-day upon receipt of news of the death of Supreme Court Justice Dean yesterday. Governor Pennypacker, who is averse to being drawn into this Philadelphia fight, is ambitious for Supreme Court honors. It was suggested to-day that he be induced to resign upon a promise that he will be appointed to succeed Justice Dean. Then, with Pennypacker out of the way, his successor, Lieutenant-Governor Brown, who is a stalwart organization man, could be counted on to convene the Legislature in special session to rip Weaver out of office.

The truth is that the bosses do not know where to turn. They realize at last that the fight has become a contest, not alone to defeat the gas lease, but to drive the machine out of power forever.

There is no doubt that "Boss" Durham's machine—a week ago the most compact and powerful political organization in the country—is on the verge of dissolution. The pirate craft is being ground to pieces on the rocks of the proposed gas works steal.

Mayor Weaver said: "The situation becomes more encouraging every hour. I hope and believe that the lease will be defeated, though I can give you no figures."

Samuel Springer, a member of Councils from a downtown ward, has presided over an empty saloon since he voted for the lease. He also has consented to desert the gang if the boycott is lifted.

John Doak, who runs a dyehouse, has been forced from his allegiance by the withdrawal of big contracts. "We will have no dealings with a man who assists in robbing the city," said his customers.

Charles Graham, a florist, was told that he could take his choice between the gang and a $10,000 order for Memorial Day decorations, and he has left the machine.

George Kucker, attorney for a building and loan association, had to choose between his position and the gang, and his vote has been added to the list of those who will stand by the mayor.

Councilman Charles Connell's fight was pathetic. His wife is seriously ill. From the time his vote was cast in favor of the lease he and his family have been ostracized. Even his children could not find playmates, and with tears in his eyes Connell announced to-day that he would support the Mayor.

To these remarkable devices have the enraged people of Philadelphia resorted to kill the gas lease and smash the Republican machine. Excitement continues at fever heat. The Mayor was given another ovation when he left City Hall for luncheon. Thousands of people crowded about him, cheering and insisting upon shaking his hand. They followed him to the University Club, waited until he had finished his luncheon and then escorted him back to City Hall again, and did not cease cheering until the doors of the Mayor's office were closed before them.

DOG FOLLOWED WOMAN TO CELL

Humbert, a handsome Italian hound, showed his devotion to his mistress, Mrs. Beulah W. White, by protecting her from a noisy crowd which was following the woman, who was intoxicated; by accompanying her to the Roxbury Crossing station when she was arrested, and by insisting on passing the night on guard in her cell.

Mrs. White fell to the sidewalk and Humbert stood guard over her until the police arrived, when he followed his mistress to the signal box. Then he jumped into the patrol wagon when he saw her being taken away, and in the cell at the police station took his post beside her couch, and growled fiercely whenever a sound was heard in the corridor.

KING ALFONSO OFF TO PARIS

MADRID, May 27.—King Alfonso will start to-night on his state visits to Paris and London. This will be the first time that King Alfonso has been outside of Spain. He will be accompanied by Senor Villa Urrutia, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and a suite of distinguished officials.

King Alfonso will arrive in Paris Tuesday next. During his stay in Paris a private telegraph wire to Madrid will enable the King to transact state business.

"AL" ADAMS'S DAUGHTER GETS NEWPORT DIVORCE

MRS. EVELYN BRAINTREE ADAMS ARMIT.

Daughter of the millionaire policy man, who secures freedom from Robert Lee Armit on the ground of drunkenness.

WITNESSES DEPOSE THAT HUSBAND WAS STEADILY DRUNK.

Special to the Boston American.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 27.—Mrs. Robert Lee Armit, who was Evelyn Braintree Adams, daughter of Al Adams, the millionaire policy king of New York, has been granted a divorce in the appellate division of the Supreme Court by Justice Blodgett. The decree was granted on the grounds of continual intoxication on the part of Armit, whom she married in June, 1902.

All the evidence was by deposition. Mrs. Armit said she had been a kind and loving wife, but that her husband had left her without food and had sadly neglected her. She said he was intoxicated half the time. She stated that she did not know until after the wedding that he had pawned her jewels to pay their transportation to Ensenada, Mexico, where they went after their marriage.

Lawrence T. Adams, her brother, said that Armit gambled and was seldom sober, that he did not pay his hotel bill, and never supported his wife.

William H. Puffer, a mining engineer, deposed that he knew the Armits in Mexico and that Mrs. Armit had been a good wife, while her husband was very dissipated. According to Puffer, Armit has kept company with actresses since Mrs. Armit left him in September, 1902, or about three months after the wedding.

Mrs. Armit asked for a divorce decree, on the grounds of neglect to provide, extreme cruelty and continued drunkenness.

KEPT AFLOAT BY LIFE-SAVERS

The two-masted schooner William Slater, with her crew completely exhausted from twenty-four hours' work at the pumps, was towed into the harbor and anchored off the New Haven Railroad docks. For a day and a night the schooner had been leaking like a sieve, and was only prevented from sinking by the timely aid of six life-savers, who put out to the distressed vessel from the Pamet River Life-Saving Station and relieved the men at the pumps when they were at the point of giving up and abandoning the vessel to its fate.

The William Slater, under command of Captain Alfred Patterson, was loaded with coal and was on a voyage from New York to Hurricane Island, Maine. The leaks in the schooner were caused by strains in her hull received during a southwest gale which she encountered off Nantucket Shoals on Thursday.

WIFE'S CARESS REVEALED LIE

Isaac Rosenberg, who arrived here a week ago on the Saxonia and is now in the custody of the immigration officials, will be deported as an undesirable immigrant unless the appeal he and his wife have made at Washington reverses the order of the local office.

He alleged that he had a wife and two children living in England, but the officials were informed that his wife was living in this city and her address given. She was sent for and as soon as she saw him threw herself into his arms. He tried to brazen it out, but was forced to admit that she was his wife.

ALAN DALE'S FIRST ITALIAN THEATRE NIGHT

Visits a Naples Playhouse Unknown to Travellers and Has New Sensations.

PLAYERS REAL ACTORS

By Alan Dale.

Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner.

Naples, Italy, May 21.—I determined that my first experience amid the theatres of Italy, as an utter, absolute, and undiluted greenhorn, should be genuinely Neapolitan. I made up my mind to avoid guides, "show" places like the San Carlo Opera House, on the Bellini, and to go in with the Naples mob. It was rather brave, wasn't it? for Italy, to a foreigner, is not easy; it is also a bit wearing on the nerves, and occasionally it is even "so sudden."

I selected the Theatre Sannazaro, which is so peculiar to Naples that English and American visitors have never heard of it. It was a horrible night. The alleged blue skies of Italy had been black and glowery all day. Vesuvius was hidden in a fog, and declined to prove to me its superiority in the matter of light effects to Mr. Belasco; it was as cold as December, and I had decided that Naples was a bit of a fraud.

The Theatre Sannazaro is situated in a filthy alley called the Via Chiaja, with an occasional sidewalk, and an immense amount of gutter. It was not necessary to dress up to the occasion, but rather down to it. I thought of Forty-second street as I ploughed my way through mobs of beggars who thrust their deformities in my face, and whined for cash. A man with the stump of an arm, denuded for my benefit; a woman with a withered hand, rickety children, and distorted babies beset my path. I felt a bit nauseated—as though the joy of living was not quite as keen as it was cracked up to be. It was theatering under distressing circumstances.

Was to Open at 21:30.

The piece was billed to open at half-past twenty-one, which is Italian for 9:30 p. m. There was no crowd outside the doors. Beggars gambolled at the very portals of the Teatre Sannazaro, and the Via Chiaja was not unlike the Rue de la Mulberry in New York. My Italian being a bit fishy, I couldn't commune with the high dignitary at the door. I asked for a "poltrone" seat, and the name seemed relevant. I'm sure I looked like the seat—for I was as timid as though I expected to be "barred" by an Italian ramification of the New York Theatre Trust.

They gave me a primitive bit of red paper, with the number of the seat and its location, written in ink, if you, please. Evidently printing is expensive in Naples. I followed a few matrons, who looked like the real thing. (I always find that matrons look fat, and the same, in all nationalities.) Passing a sort of stall a rude dago held me up and plucked my cane from my hand. I love my cane; it is a fetich; I always wear it, and I longed to keep it with me. Yet nay! The rude dago said something emotional and Vesuvian, put a brass slab in my hand, and pushed me away.

Felt Like 30 Cents.

I felt helpless and like thirty cents, but I relish the feeling occasionally. It is a good education. It makes you feel that outside of your own little mud-heap you are quite small potatoes. I can recommend the sensation as fine mental discipline.

Trouble began when I wanted a program. The attendant was densely surprised. He begged me to wait while he excavated one, and in five minutes reappeared with a sad, limp bit of paper that looked as though it couldn't help it. Such a depressed program! No whiskey advertisements! No familiar feminine advice as to how to be lissome and corsetted! It was—er—just a program!

The theatre was quite small, red and primitive, made up of galleries of boxes, an orchestra and a "pit." My seat in the orchestra, equal to the $2 seats in New York, cost four lira (80 cents), and the most exclusive boxes could be bought for $3.50. They are called "palchi," which is as good, I ween, as anything else. The Sunnazaro looked like a cheap 'one-night stand" house. A few macaroni-eating gentlemen composed the orchestral arrangements. The curtain showed a gloomy picture of Mount Vesuvius, looking as though it would hate to be asked to "erupt."

Hats on Till Curtain Rose.

The men wore their hats until the curtain rose. The women, dressed sedately and old-fashionedly, in a manner that would be considered dowdy in the Bowery, were nevertheless interesting, because they seemed to be there for enjoyment. They cackled very little, and were a bit awed. Theatregoing in Naples is not a mere incident, as it is in New York. The Neapolitans save up for their evening's amusement.

The piece was a new comedy by Alfredo Testoni, new to Naples, and called "In Automobile." The Teatro Sannazaro has a stock company, and its director, Flavio Ando, with the leading lady, Tina di Lorenzo, were the central figures. It was nearly 10 o'clock when the piece began, and there were three acts. A huge prompter's box, two feet high, rose in the centre of the footlights—like a naughty lady with her hat on, quite obstructing the view of those behind. But it had its uses. I found that out very soon. The prompter read every speech ahead of its utterance by the actor, and the result was a sort of buzz that kept up insistently. At first it was absolutely exasperating, but the cast seemed oblivious to it. They pitched their voices above that of the prompter.

No Moral Disaster.

It is not necessary to describe "In Automobile." To be funny in Naples—as elsewhere—marital tribulations are popular, evidently. The heroine of Signor Testoni's play, in order to get even with a refractory husband, took a nocturnal ride in an automobile with an admiring friend. There was no disaster, either moral or automobilic, and everything ended happily. The audience applauded a bit, and hissed a bit, but the acting was surprisingly good. Dramatically, this stock company was without flaw. Flavio Ando was as easy and "popular" as John Drew, and Tina di Lorenzo, though not a dazzling beauty, arrayed in the glories of Solomon, was—an actress. Everybody acted. The leading lady wore cheap clothes and paste diamonds, but she was an artist in her way, and I can quite imagine that the Neapolitans found the Teatro Sannazaro worth while. I fancy the New York critics would have enjoyed it, for they understand Italian so well. I remember their analytic reviews of Eleanora Duse's work in New York. I'm a bit off on Italian; I admit it.

Curtain Went Down for Keeps.

At the close of the act the curtain was helped down by two attendants, who pulled it at each side. It was not one of the patent New York affairs that decline to stay down until the enthusiastic approval of a clacque has spent itself. At the Teatro Sannazaro when the curtain was down it was down for keeps. Between the acts the men smoked in a stone corridor, around which tables were placed, at which refreshments were on tap. Not being eager for the climax, I did not wait till the end. The rude dago who had seized my cane refused to return it until I had dumped a dose of copper money in his hand. Even then he seemed dissatisfied, but as I had not coveted his attentions I left him cursing. (That is to say, he was cursing.)

This was my first experience in Italian theatre-going. I shall follow it up, so be prepared for the worst. To-night I am due at the Salone Margherita, where they are said to frivol.

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE IS 86 YEARS OLD TO-DAY

Messages of Congratulation From All Over the World Received by Boston's Famous Poet, Philanthropist and Authoress.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, the famous author, poet and philanthropist, is to-day quietly celebrating the eighty-sixth anniversary of her birth at her home, No. 241 Beacon street. With the immediate members of her household she has been busy receiving the many callers who have congratulated her upon the passing of another milestone in the journey of life, and in acknowledging telegrams and cablegrams from all parts of the world. While Mrs. Howe's health is very good, she has refrained from having an elaborate celebration of the event.

Mrs. Howe is one of the most prolific poetesses and authoresses the United States has ever seen. When but seventeen years of age she wrote reviews on Lamartine's "Jocelyn" and on poems by Schiller and Goethe. In 1852 and 1853 she wrote "Passion Flowers," "Words for the Hour" and a blank verse drama which was played at Wallack's Theatre in New York and in Boston.

Her most famous poem, in the eyes of the great masses, is that stirring hymn, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." Among her other works may be numbered "From Oak to the Olive" and "A Trip to Cuba."

Mrs. Howe was born in New York City on May 27, 1819, the daughter of Samuel and Julia Cutler Ward. Her father died in 1829. In 1843 she became the wife of Dr. Samuel G. Howe.

WIFE HOPES BEVERLY SLAYER IS CAUGHT

"I HOPE THEY'LL HANG HIM TO THE NEAREST TREE," SHE DECLARES.

Special to the Boston American.

BEVERLY, May 27.—Mrs. Mary Waddell, wife of Foster W. Waddell, prohibition orator, who shot and killed J. Fred Hayes, a boarder in the Cabot House, and who is sought by the police, told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter that she hoped her husband would be caught.

"I hope they will catch him and hang him to the nearest tree," she exclaimed, vehemently.

"I cannot imagine a more terrible situation than that in which I am situated. In less than a week I expect my child to be born. His father is a fugitive, the police searching for him because he has killed a man. My home is broken up. The business which I started here has been almost ruined. I do not know that I can start it again, but the lodgers have been very kind to me.

"No Cause for Jealousy."

"It was my husband's ugly disposition that caused this thing. He had no reason for it. There was no cause for jealousy. About a year ago he knocked Hayes down and rendered him unconscious for no reason whatever. He was not a drinking man. That was not the cause of this affair.

"Practically I have supported myself. I was relieved when he went away and disliked to see him return from one of his lecture trips. He was a natural trouble maker."

The shooting took place in the room occupied by Hayes. Waddell entered the room and finding his wife there, without a word pulled a revolver and began emptying its contents in the direction of Hayes. Two of the bullets took effect—one in the jaw and the other in the groin.

Set Baby Carriage Afire.

On his way out of the house Waddell caught sight of a baby carriage in the hall and it is declared he set fire to it. Fires were found burning in three other places and the police believe that it was the man's intention to burn the house to the ground. Doctors and firemen were summoned. The injured man was removed to the Beverly Hospital and he died at 2 o'clock to-day. The firemen soon had the flames extinguished without much damage.

Policeman Warren W. Jones went to Boston to-day to see if he could get any trace of the fugitive there. Police Inspector Harry Pierce was assigned to the case in Boston.

Waddell is forty-five years of age and an interesting character. He at one time attended Oberlin College in Ohio and studied for the ministry. In later years he was a "fakir" and a lecturer. His victim, Hayes, was twenty-five years old and was employed as a stitcher in a shoe factory.

WILL CUT OFF HEIRS WITH $1 IF THEY FIGHT

Amos Brainard of Hyde Park Bequeathed $500,000 to Young Wife and Relatives.

WARNED AGAINST CONTEST

Giving one-half of his fortune of $500,000 to the wife, more than fifty years his junior, whom he married a year ago, and the other half to the children, who became estranged because of his late marriage, Amos H. Brainard of Hyde Park endeavored, before his death, which tok place a few days ago, to provide against any possible contest over his will.

Another provision that he made may also do much to prevent the lawsuit attorneys have been anticipating since the news of his death, for it is the fourteenth clause of the will that if any heirs contest the will each of the contestants shall receive but $1 instead of the amount provided in the previous clauses.

The testament has been filed at Dedham. No intimation has yet been given of a contest. The heirs have thirty days in which to decide to accept the provisions of the will, or fight for a different distribution of the estate.

Amos H. Brainard was formerly president of the Becker-Brainard Milling Machine Company of Hyde Park. He retired from active business affairs several years ago. He was eighty-three years old and death came suddenly from pneumonia, last Sunday, after a ride on Friday in an open electric car.

The marriage of Mr. Brainard to Mrs. L. T. Benedict, a young and charming widow, in New York, last August, came as a surprise to his friends in Hyde Park, and not less to his children.

His son and five daughters, all issue of the first and second wives—Mrs. Benedict was his third marriage—were said to be very much exercised over their father's marriage, and there was an estrangement.

The first clause of the will leaves to the young widow $15,000, together with all furniture and household property in his home at the time of his death.

Next, his daughter Genevieve and his son, Amos D. Brainard, receive legacies of $10,000 each.

Mr. Brainard's three other daughters—Josephine, wife of Randolph P. Moseley; Edith I., wife of John L. Barry, Jr., and Ida A., wife of Orsemus S. Hyde—received $5,000 each.

3,500 ALIENS COMING HERE

The officials of the Boston office of the United State immigration service are making preparations for one of the busiest weeks they have had since the big rate war last year, to begin with the arrival of the White Star liner Romanic, due next Monday.

The Romanic has 1,800 passengers on board, 200 of whom are returning tourists and the other 1,600 immigrants from Asia and Southern Europe. The Cunarder Ivernia is due to arrive on Thursday with 1,300 immigrants. The White Star liner Cymric is due Saturday from Liverpool with about six hundred immigrants.

SEASON'S FIRST HEAT VICTIM

Thomas Larue, a carpenter, sixty-three years of age, living at No. 17 Sargent street, was overcome by the heat while working at No. 12 Clarkson street, Dorchester, to-day. He was sent to the City Hospital, where his condition is reported as dangerous.

WOBURN LIGHT FIGHT COMING

Veto of the Woburn city order giving the Edison Electric Light Company of Boston the privilege of securing the wires, poles and lights of the Woburn Light, Heat & Power Company for lighting the city, promises to furnish an interesting session of the next meeting of the Board of Aldermen when the veto will come up for action.

Mayor Lawrence Reade vetoed the order on the ground that the present company was doing the work satisfactorily and because great inconvenience would result to the residents through having the streets torn up to lay the large conduits that would be necessary to carry the power from Boston to Woburn.

$1 TO HEIR WHO CONTESTS WILL

The will of the late Amos H. Brainard of Hyde Park was filed in Dedham to-day. The estate is estimated at half a million dollars.

A number of bequests ranging from $25 to $15,000 are made to relatives and others, and the remainder of the estate is given to his widow and surviving children.

One provision of the will is to the effect that if any heir contests the will such heir is to receive but one dollar.

VETERAN LAWYER DIES AT WINTHROP

Charles H. Pattee, one of Boston's best known lawyers, is dead at his home in Winthrop. Practically all of his life had been spent in Boston. He was born in Charlestown, October 6, 1843, the son of Asa Dustin and Laira Bartlett Pattee. He was famous for his large acquaintance with theatrical people, and had a marvelous memory of plays and players. He had practiced law at the Suffolk bar since 1865. The funeral will be from his late home in Winthrop Monday afternoon.

13 SERENADING STUDENTS SHOT

Ignored Warning of Teachers to Keep Away From Girls' School at Night.

ROANOKE, Va., May 27.—Between the hour of midnight and daylight thirteen Randolph-Macon College students at Bedford City were fired on with shotguns by persons hidden inside the building of Jeter Institute, a female school of the place. It is understood that meetings had been going on for months between the students of the two institutions in violation of the orders of the faculties of both schools.

Professor Parker, president of the female school, had made, it is alleged, repeated complaints regarding the action of the Randolph-Macon boys. On Sunday morning thirteen boys with tin horns, cowbells, tin cans and other rattletraps started a farce serenade, when they were put to flight by several volleys from shotguns loaded with birdshot.

It is thought that all of them were more or less wounded, but five were so seriously peppered that it became necessary to call in physicians. One young man was seriously shot in the face and the others received the fire of the teachers of the female school in their backs.

Professor Parker admitted to-day the shots were fired from his school building, but would not incriminate any one individually. The affair has created a great sensation.

STUDENTS GIVEN VOLLEY OF LEAD

ROANOKE, Va., May 27.—A crowd of thirteen Randolph-Macon College students at Bedford City were fired on with shotguns by persons hidden inside the building of Jeter Institute, a girls' school of the place. A gang of the boys armed with tin horns and cow bells started a racket in the way of a farce serenade. Several volleys from shotguns loaded with bird shot were fired at them. It is thought that all of them were more or less wounded. Five were so seriously peppered that it became necessary to call in physicians.

MAKES HUSBAND RICH BY DIVORCE

Wife Seeks Decree in Order to Save Fortune Denied on Her Account.

KENOSHA, May 27.—In order that her husband may come into wealth denied him on account of his marriage, which was opposed by the father, Mrs. Daisy B. Rogers of Chicago has started suit for divorce here against her husband, Charles Rogers.

It is to be a divorce of convenience and on it depends the future wealth of Mr. Rogers. Mrs. Rogers admits that she still loves her husband, but she will not stand in the way of his securing the fortune that was left to him by his father with the understanding that the wife be put aside.

The will provided that the son should receive only $6 a week from the estate so long as he was husband of his present wife. Mrs. Rogers says in her petition for divorce that her husband deserted her in June of 1902 and that since that time they have lived apart, and that Mr. Rogers has not contributed to her support. It is said they may remarry.

WANDERER READ OF OWN DEATH

CARNEGIE, Pa., May 27.—William McIntyre, for years a resident of this town, disappeared five weeks ago and was supposed to be dead. He has returned home, surprising his family, who thought they had buried him.

McIntyre notified a local insurance agent who had promised to pay insurance to the supposed widow that he needn't mind the money just now. At the same time McIntyre called on his brother and asked for a detailed bill of his funeral expenses, and sent word to some neighbors that Mrs. McIntyre had some first-class mourning suits almost new, which she would sell cheap.

One week after McIntyre disappeared a body was pulled from the river at Beaver, Pa., and buried. Later it was disinterred and both Mrs. McIntyre and a brother of William identified it as his. Two days ago, while working in Detroit, McIntyre read in a paper that he was dead and buried, and said he thought he would come home and look things over.

PRIEST CURES RHEUMATISM

MARQUETTE, Mich., May 27.—Fifty of this city's halt, blind and lame have within the past month, journeyed to Peshtigo, Wis., to receive treatment at the hands of Rev. Fr. P. S. Daguault, a Catholic priest, who is said to possess wonderful healing powers.

Charles J. Johnson, a landscape gardener, who has just returned from Peshtigo, is one of numerous Marquette people who have been cured. Johnson says that he had been bedridden with rheumatism for two months before he decided to make the trip to the Wisconsin town.

"I stayed at a hotel in Peshtigo for nineteen days," said Johnson in an interview, "and I received one treatment each day from Fr. Daguault, who came to the hotel to see me. His treatment was not what I would call a massage. He simply took my limbs in his hands and by a gentle pressure worked from my knees to my feet with a kneading movement.

"When his hands came in contact with my flesh I thought a thousand needles were entering my body, the pricking sensation being most pronounced as he worked toward my feet. I watched to see if he said any prayers when he began treatment, but he did not, and he afterward told me that he does not claim to possess any supernatural powers. After two or three treatments the rheumatic pains left me entirely, and I began to walk a little, until finally when I returned to Marquette I walked on and off the train."

EMPEROR LEBAUDY TO START RACING STABLE

Brussels, May 27.—M. Jasques Lebaudy, the Emperor of the Sahara, has sent a check for a million francs, dated "At Our Tent Capital, Sahara," to his Brussels representative, authorizing him to establish a racing stable.

His horses are to race under the name of Jacques the First, and all colts, successively born in the stables, will receive the names of kings and rulers.

COURT ABOLISHED AFTER 200 YEARS

NEWPORT, May 27.—After a continuous existence of 200 years, the Appelate Division of the Supreme Court of Rhode Island held its last session in Newport County to-day. It was abolished by this year's Legislature, and its place will be taken by the new Superior Court.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT TO SPORTSMEN AND ATHLETES!

Boston Sunday American Makes a Departure That Will Give Its Readers the Most Complete and Up-to-Date Sporting Department in the World.

BEGINNING with its issue to-morrow the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will inaugurate a new era in its department of sports and athletics.

This department will be one of the most complete, accurate and interesting ever published in any daily newspaper.

It will be edited by A. H. C. Mitchell, assisted by a staff of the most competent experts in the various lines of athletics. There are few as competent in this country to take charge of and make successful a sporting department as Mr. Mitchell.

A. H. C. MITCHELL, Sporting Editor.

This is one of the most important days of the season in the sporting world, and to-morrow the pages of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will be replete with matter of interest to all who care for any out-door pastime. One of the features will be the great boat race on the Charles River between the Harvard and Cornell Varsity crews. The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, will publish the best account of this important aquatic event. A corps of experts will see it, and photographers and artists will illustrate it fully. Then there are the ball games of the Boston league clubs in Chicago and Philadelphia. Each contest will be reported fully in the SUNDAY AMERICAN. There are several New England crews in the Henley Regatta at Philadelphia to-day. How they finished in the various races will be fully printed to-morrow. If you are interested in trotting and pacing races on the speedways, complete accounts written by an expert will be given. Then there are the college and amateur baseball games, golf matches and tennis touurneys. All will be fully reported in the great sporting pages of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Each Branch of Sport Will Be in Charge of an Expert and Every Event of Importance Will Be Well Written Up and Illustrated.

Mr. Mitchell has had 15 years' experience on New York, Chicago and Boston papers, and is an authority on sporting matters. He is one of the best baseball writers in the country, and his articles on the national game which have appeared in the BOSTON AMERICAN have received the most favorable comments. Mr. Mitchell is also an expert yachtsman, and the international races of the past ten years have all been written up by him, both in newspaper and magazine articles. Mr. Mitchell will be assisted by the following well-known experts:

Pugilists and Pugilism.

W. W. NAUGHTON, the famous expert on ring matters and sporting editor of the San Francisco Examiner, will continue to report for the BOSTON AMERICAN all sporting matters occurring in his section of the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Naughton is without a peer as a writer on matters connected with the prize ring. For many years he has been the accepted authority on boxing and boxers, and has seen and reported for the Hearst papers every important contest that has taken place in the last fifteen years.

In San Francisco Mr. Naughton's influence in boxing matters particularly is greater than that of any other one man. He is consulted prior to making the great matches, and is usually selected as stakeholder in the big contests.

Fighting in the West has not been restricted as in the East, and Mr. Naughton has had part in arranging a number of contests in the last few years. His expert opinions of the fighters and his graphic descriptions of the big fights will be telegraphed hereafter, as in the past, from the ringside

Football and Thoroughbred Racing.

JOHN H. NELDEN, the well-known New York sporting writer, will be Mr. Mitchell's chief assistant in directing the BOSTON AMERICAN'S sporting pages. Mr. Nelden has a wide and varied experience in all sporting matters, but he will give particular attention to football and athletics, and when the thoroughbred racing meeting begins at Providence he will have charge of this department, and it will be covered in the most up-to-date style possible. Mr. Nelden has long experience on Metropolitan tracks, and the meeting at Narragansett Park will be as thoroughly reported as are the races on Long Island by the New York papers.

Next Fall Mr. Nelden will devote his time to football and criticise the work of all the more important teams in the East before the games in a series of special articles. During the present season he will contribute several timely and interesting stories on amateur and college athletics in New England. As a result, the readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN will be kept informed on news of importance in these branches of sport.

Cartoons by Tad.

TAD—you all know him from his cartoons and terse articles on doings in the squared circle. His right name is Theo. A. Dorgan, but it's as plain Tad we like him best. He is in a class by himself as a cartoonist, and he'll cure the worst case of the blues quicker than half a dozen doctors. He will be a big feature to the BOSTON AMERICAN'S staff and will help make these sporting pages the best in the world.

Tad comes from the Coast, where he made a great reputation as a cartoonist and writer. Since he has been East there is no department in sports which he has not reported, and as he always sketches everything of interest, his stories and cartoons are eagerly sought for.

Tad numbers among his acquaintances all the lights of the athletic world. He knows "Lanky Bob Fitz," Jim Jeffries, Jimmy Britt, "Young Corbett" and other fighters of prominence intimately. He also enjoys the friendship of many baseball and football stars.

Stories from the Ball Field.

SAM CRANE, whose fame as a writer on baseball matters is based on the actual experience gained during fifteen years of active work as a professional ball player, will write special articles on the national game.

Mr. Crane is one of the best-known baseball writers in this country, and his reports and criticisms are authoritative. His years of play on the diamond with the strongest teams in the country have made it possible for him to interpret every phase of the game in a manner beyond the capabilities of the man who has learned the game from the grand stand alone.

Mr. Crane was best known as the second baseman of the "Old Mets" in 1883, and of the Detroits, which included the "Big Four," in 1885-6-7. His last years as a player was in 1890, when he played with the New Yorks. Mr. Crane is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Since leaving the diamond he has kept in touch with every development of the game. His influence as an authority on baseball has had much to do with such changes as have been made in the last few years.

What's the Matter WITH THE Champs?

Here they are down at the bottom of the ladder when last season at this time they held an easy lead. What's the reason?

Hon. Michael J. Sullivan

That former famous pitcher and now prominent lawyer and member of the Governor's Council, will give his views on this most interesting question in to-morrow's

Boston Sunday American

Polo, Tennis and Automobiling.

WILTON SIMPSON FARNSWORTH, by reason of his versatility and the wide range of his knowledge on all branches of sport, is one of the BOSTON AMERICAN'S best writers. He has made a close study of the so-called gentlemanly sports—polo, tennis and automobiling—and a large acquaintance among followers of these pastimes gives him opportunities for procuring news held by but few. Mr. Farnsworth has for several years been connected with leading New England papers, and his work in connection with these sports has brought him well-deserved praise.

Boxing and Amateur Sports.

IRVING STOCKTON CLARK has been connected with Boston newspapers the past ten years, and is an authority on interscholastic and all amateur sports. His wide experience and acquaintance make him a most valuable member of the BOSTON AMERICAN staff. He is an expert on boxing, and his comment on ring matters will be one of the features of the sporting pages.

Mr. Clark is also well acquainted with the national game, and looks after, that sport in this city when the Champs are away from home.

Rowing and Cycling.

ALEXANDER C. SULLIVAN, the clever young reporter, will continue to write for the BOSTON AMERICAN, and in the future will devote his entire time to rowing and cycling. As these two sports are very important in New England, readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN will be given all the latest news, while Mr. Sullivan will write special articles from time to time. Mr. Sullivan has a large acquaintance among local sporting men, and this proves of great value to him in obtaining exclusive news and articles for admirers of his special branches of sport.

Trotting and Pacing.

LEMUEL TROTT has been connected with light harness racing for the past forty years and is known as an expert judge of trotters and pacers from Maine to California. He will have charge of this department, and the BOSTON AMERICAN will in the future devote considerable space to this sport, so popular in New England.

Mr. Trott has done much to make the Metropolitan Driving Club a great success, and he was one of the first to boom the sport on the Charles River Speedway.

PRETTY YOUNG WIFE LEAVES HOME IN LYNN

Starts for Boston; Mysteriously Disappears, Leaving Husband and Children.

Special to the Boston American.

LYNN, May 27.—Mystery enshrouds the strange disappearance of pretty Mrs. Fannie Sawtelle, the young wife of William J. Sawtelle, who left her home late Tuesday presumably to make a quick trip to Boston and return.

At her home near the fashionable Oxford Club off Nahant street, a husband and three-year-old daughter, Florence, mourn the absence of the wife and mother. The father is sure an accident has befallen his wife and little Florence continually calls for her "mamma."

Mrs. Sawtelle is twenty-three years old and has been married six years. She has two children, Florence and a baby girl not yet eight months old.

Mrs. Sawtelle worshipped her two children and has always been a most indulgent mother. She has had no quarrel with her husband. She has been confined most of the time to her own home for some months by ill health.

She had business in Boston Tuesday and with the full knowledge of her husband and married sister, Mrs. May Jones, whom she got to come and care for her children during her planned absence of but a few hours, she left home.

Night came but the mother did not put in an appearance. Mr. Sawtelle knew not what to make of it, but refusing to think anything had happened to his wife waited, expecting her to come back the next day. But still she is absent.

"I fear my wife is in some hospital, lying on a cot, unable to tell her nurses where she lives or who she is. She must have met with some accident. She has been subject to fainting spells, and perhaps in some way met with an injury during her visit in Boston. I have searched here and there, but can find no trace of her.

"My sister," says Mrs. Jones, who is acting mother to the two little children left at home by the missing woman, "has not been altogether well lately, and I can only account for her absence by saying that she must have met with an accident. I am greatly worried and greive for the children."

Mrs. Sawtelle is of medium build, with a plump figure. She is known among her friends in the shoe city as a remarkably pretty woman. Her married life has been happy.

The missing woman has two married sisters in Lynn and two brothers living in Roxbury. Her mother, a Mrs. Keene, makes her home in New York. Mr. Sawtelle is employed by Bray, the expressman, in Lynn, and earns a good salary. He is distracted over the strange absence of his wife, and has requested the police of Lynn to aid in the search for her.

2,000-ACRE FOREST FIRE AT SANDWICH

SANDWICH, May 27.—Two thousand acres of woodland have been laid waste by the forest fire which started in the cranberry bog of Thicket Run swamp yesterday forenoon. A large force of men has been kept fighting through the night to hold it in check and it is believed that it will be soon under control unless the wind changes.

PENNA. R. R. BRIDGE DYNAMITED BY GANG

ATTEMPTS FOLLOW THREATS ON THE LIFE OF PRESIDENT CASSATT BY NON-UNION MEN.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 27.—The new drawbridge over the Hackensack river, built by the Pennsylvania railroad, was dynamited early to-day as the result of a deliberate plot, say the detectives who have been investigating the explosion.

It is now believed that the explosion of dynamite in the excavation of the new Pennsylvania station yesterday, at first thought to be an accident, was another effort of the gang which has threatened to destroy the property of the Pennsylvania Company and to kill President Cassatt and other officials.

At the time that the explosion occurred, the Boston express, six sleepers, heavily laden, was passing over the old Pennsylvania bridge. Had the raft on which the plotters placed the dynamite to float it against the drawbridge gone slightly out of its course it would have struck the bridge over which the train was passing, and the loss of life would have been appalling.

Log Saved the Bridge.

It had evidently been planned by the dynamiters that the raft should strike the drawbridge squarely and after the explosion there would be nothing left of the massive structure.

Their plans miscarried because of a sunken log. The raft struck this and the dynamite went off with a roar that shattered windows a half mile away and threw detectives, who were guarding both ends of the bridge, to the ground.

The bridge was somewhat damaged, but can be repaired within a short time.

It is declared by Daniel McNally, chief of detectives of the Pennsylvania lines, that the dynamiting was the work of a gang of non-union men who had been refused work on the new structure.

After McNally had investigated, he said: "There is no doubt that this is the work of the gang. They have threatened death to the railroad officials and destruction of the property. If we can lay hands on them they will be taken away by undertakers. That is the only way we can deal with them."

Threaten Cassatt's Life.

Within the past few weeks officials of the road are said to have received threatening letters from disgruntled non-union iron workers. They demanded employment, but, as the road is doing its own construction work, their threats were ignored.

But they were repeated and even the lives of President Cassatt and other officials are said to have been threatened.

Because of these threats the railroad has had a strong guard of special detectives on duty at the drawbridge. This did not prevent the conspirators from setting upon and severely beating Foreman William McShane as he was leaving for home Wednesday night. The guard was then increased, and McNally took personal charge. He placed guards on both sides of the river and kept a close watch day and night.

Dynamite on a Raft.

Seeing that it was impossible to destroy the bridge at close quarters the plotters hit upon a novel scheme. They made a raft above the bridge, put their charge of dynamite upon it, waited for the return of the tide and then started it down stream.

It was their desire that the deadly raft should strike the main support of the draw. But the log just above the draw changed their plans and the dynamite went off prematurely.

OFFER $10,000 IN THEFT CASE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 27.—Tiffany & Co. now offer a reward of $5,000 for the recovery of the three diamonds stolen from their shop, and $5,000 more for the arrest and conviction of the thief. An agency was instructed to-day to place an advertisement of the reward in all the leading newspapers of this country and Europe.

This step marks the abandonment by the company of hope that the police can solve the mystery. While an arrest is still looked for in connection with the one strong clue on which the detectives are working, the latter are more sanguine than the Tiffany people are.

Inspector O'Brien to-day advised that there be no further delay in offering the reward. This was decided at a consultation at police headquarters between representatives of the firm and the bureau chiefs.

DESERTED, SHE KILLS HERSELF

Jealousy, unrequited love and straitened financial circumstances are responsible for the suicide of Miss Jennie Lewis, who was found dead in her flat at No. 22 Village street with a bullet in her head and a revolver lying at her side.

While her sister, Mrs. Walter Taylor, of No. 305 West Third street, South Boston, is firm in the belief that she was foully dealt with, Dr. Draper, who made an examination, and the police say there is no evidence of a crime.

Miss Lewis came to Boston from Sydney, N. S., three years ago.

Boys Be Knights. You can become a Knight by getting the mask with the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN next Sunday. All New England boys are going to be Knights. Be sure you are one of them.

HAMBURG IN LEAD FOR THE KAISER'S CUP

Fleur De Lys of Gloucester Is Second and the Atlantic in Third Place.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 27.—Here are the latest reported positions of the three leading vessels in the 3,000-mile cross-ocean race to the Lizard for the Kaiser's cup:

First—Hamburg, May 24, latitude 42 deg. 18 ½ in. north, longitude 44 deg. 25 min. west.

Second—Fleur de Lys, May 23, latitude 40 deg. north, longitude 53 deg. west.

Third, Atlantic, May 23, latitude 40 deg. north, longitude 53 deg. west.

The latest reports of the racers, which have now more than half completed their long run, were brought by the Cunard liner Carpathia. These are that the German yacht, the Hamburg, is 136 miles in the lead, with the Fleur de Lys, the Atlantic, the Endymion, the Ailsa and the Valhalla following in the order named. The Hildegarde is also supposed to be well up with the leaders.

The following wireless message was received from the Celtic, eastbound, via the steamship Campani and the Marconi wireless station at Siasconset, Mass.:

Celtic sighted German yacht Hamburg May 24, at 11:30 a. m. (Greenwich time), in latitude 42 deg. 18 min. north, longitude 44 deg. 25 min. west, 1,357 miles east of Sandy Hook.

May 24, 1:45 p. m. (Greenwich time), Celtic sighted yacht Endymion in latitude 43 deg. north, longitude 45 deg. 8 min. west, 1,302 miles east of Sandy Hook.

The Cunard liner Campania, which arrives to-day, is expected to have further news of the yachts.

All the boys in your neighborhood are talking about brave Knights. You have read about them. You know what kind of a headpiece they wore. Perhaps you have seen them. You can have one yourself by getting the Knight's mask with the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN next Sunday.

OLD SPANISH CRUISER NOW IN U. S. NAVY

NEWPORT, May 27.—The cruiser Reina Mercedes, captured from the Spaniards when Cervera's fleet tried to get out of Santiago Harbor, has gone into commission here as a training ship. The vessel was thoroughly repaired at the Portsmouth Navy Yard. It has accommodations for nearly 300 men.

WHIST FOR GIRLS' CLUB.

The Ladies' Catholic Club Association held a whist party in Catholic Union Hall for the benefit of a young women's club which the association founded a short time ago. Mrs. William McCarthy, president of the association, was master of ceremonies, and the tellers were Mrs. James J. Fox and Mrs. W. J. Cornell. The next party will be June 9.

BURGLARS ROB MRS. LEASE AT PISTOL POINT

Famous Kansas Lecturer Made to Hand Over Valuables in Her New York Home.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 27.—Mary Elizabeth Lease, the noted Kansas lecturer and Populist, to-day had a thrilling encounter with two burglars in her home at No. 64 East One Hundred and Twenty-second street. With a pistol at her temple, she was forced to give up $110 in money and $500 worth of jewels and silverware.

"As I stepepd into the hallway of my home," said Mrs. Lease, "a man suddenly sprang at me. He held a pistol to my temple.

"'If you are a sensible woman you will make no outcry,' he said. "I am a sensible woman and I kept quiet. He took a diamond studded heart from my throat. A second man took my bag with $110 in it, many souvenir spoons and some other jewelry."

Both burglars escaped.

LEAP FROM CAR TO HORSEBACK

CENTRAL FALLS, R. I., May 27.—Chasing a pair of maddened fire horses on an electric car, Motorman Elmer Carpenter performed a feat seldom seen in any city.

After a run of several blocks, he brought his car beside the maddened horses. Gauging his distance, he shut off the power on the car and leaped to the back of the horse nearest him.

Tugging at the bridle, he was carried several blocks. As the speed of the pair slackened to a trot, Carpenter lost his grip on the leather, and in the sight of hundreds of spectators who had applauded his daring deed, was hurled beneath the hoofs of the panting steeds.

His life is hanging by a thread, but his action undoubtedly saved the lives of others, for not a person but Carpenter was injured, though the streets were crowded at the time.

PIANO RECITAL IN HUNTINGTON HALL

Huntington Chambers Hall was filled last evening at an interesting piano recital given by the pupils of Arthur Gers. The young women played with unusual skill and clearness, while the selections were well chosen, none of them being beyond the abilities of the performers, who were the Misses Emma E. Bates, Felicitas Freeman, Lora G. Prue, Etta Chenette, Maude R. Jones, Florence C. Shepherd, Corina Lussier and Christiana Caya. Miss Marie L. Sundborg, soprano, assisted, singing charmingly.

'MAGNETIZED' $610 AND IT DISAPPEARED

Clairvoyant Promised to Aid Lowell Woman to Gain Influence Over Another Person.

LOWELL, May 27.—Because she wanted to have influence over another person, she declines to say of which sex, a dressmaker, who lives near the courthouse, turned over $610 to "Professor Parkhust," a clairvoyant, who promised to return it "magnetized." When the money failed to return as the professor said it would, the dressmaker sought him at his office, No. 52 Tyler street. She found that the professor had gone, after paying his board bill.

The dressmaker was importuned by the professor to bring money with her on different occasions. The first time she went with $200. Incidentally she mentioned she could get more. The $200 was returned because $400 was needed. Then the $400 went back to her with the request that it made am cuch over $600 as possible.

As soon as she discovered that the clairvoyant and his assistant had departed, the dressmaker went to the police. She took her loss cheerfully.

"I feel like kicking myself," she said "I don't want my name to get out because my friends would laugh at me."

CUT JOKES ON ROCKEFELLER

CHICAGO, May 27.—Jests about John D. Rockefeller and how he made his millions were cut out of the comic opera by University of Chicago students at the last moment by President Harper. The opera was entitled "The King's Kalendar Keeper."

One song, entitled "Trusts," described the methods of "Frenzied Finance," referred pointedly to the manner in which Rockefeller made his money, and told how President Harper knocked at "John D.'s" door for gifts.

WOBURN JUDGE FINES AUTOISTS

Speeding automobiles at a rate which an officer swore was greatly in excess of the limit cost Augustus Post and Louis Bigelow, both of Andover, $10 each in the Woburn District Court to-day. The two machines were travelling together through Reading, Post going, the officer testified, at the rate of thirty-eight miles an hour, and Bigelow at the rate of thirty-four. The fines were imposed by Judge Henry Johnson. Both fines were paid.

TO MOBILIZE STATE TROOPS IN CHICAGO

Call Issued by Inspector-General as a Test of Military Efficiency.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, May 27.—A call for a test of the military efficiency of all the State troops in Chicago has been made by Inspector General Scott and to-day 4,000 militiamen are preparing to mobilize at the various armories.

News of the militia order gave rise to a report that Mayor Dunne had decided to appeal for troops. Mayor Dunne says:

"I have heard nothing of the matter officially. It is possible it is the intention to have a test of the National Guard just as we often have tests in the fire department in order to see how quickly they could be mobilized in case of an emergency."

Strike Spreads Hourly.

Meanwhile the strike is hourly assuming wider proportions. In every case where a load of lumber from a strike-bound firm was delivered the carpenters at work on the building struck. The Carpenters' District Council, fearing a general strike, ordered the men back to work, but the orders in most cases were disobeyed.

The officers of the union interpreted this rebellious attitude of the members to be dangerous.

Platt Still Unyielding.

Vice-President Fairbanks, who has been urged to use his influence with Senator Platt, president of the United States Express Companies, to secure concessions for the striking drivers, has conferred, unsuccessfully, with Platt by telephone. Platt reiterated his statement that the company will employ none of the strikers.

PAID TO SAVE RICH GAMBLERS

—RICHARD CANFIELD.

NEW YORK, May 27.—Richard Canfield returned from Europe to-day on the Cunard line steamship Campania. He was met at the pier by his wife and his two beautiful children, a boy and a girl, and left with them for his home in Providence. "I am entirely through with District Attorney Jerome," said Canfield to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter on the way up the bay, "or rather Mr. Jerome is through with me," he added, laughing. "My payment of a fine was due to my desire to keep Mr. Jerome from harrassing men of prominence."

CHAMPS MEET THE SOX AGAIN IN WINDY CITY

COLLINS'S MEN MUST DO MORE BATTING IN ORDER TO WIN GAMES.

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL,

Staff Correspondent of the Boston American With the Champion American League Team.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, May 27.—The Champ's batting average for the trip follows:

	A.B.	R.	1 B.	T.B.	P.C.
Selbach	12	2	5	6	.417
Freeman	30	4	10	16	.333
Winter	6	1	2	2	.333
Ferris	28	3	6	9	.214
Grimshaw	33	5	7	7	.212
Tannehill	5	1	2	2	.200
Young	5	1	1	2	.200
Stahl	27	0	5	5	.185
Unglaub	12	0	2	3	.167
Dinneen	6	0	1	1	.167
Criger	19	2	3	3	.160
Parent	33	1	5	7	.152
Burkett	32	4	4	4	.125
Collins	25	2	3	4	.120
McGovern	2	0	0	0	.000

Team average for nine games, .159.

If any interested Boston man wants to know why the Champs are not winning all he has to do is to glance at the above table. It shows at a glance just how sadly the world-beaters have fallen down with the stick, and one need look no further for one answer to the question, "What's the matter with the Bostons?"

Showed Table to Players.

I made up the above table from my score book this morning and showed it to the Boston players. "Gee Whiz," they all said, "I had no idea it was so bad as that." Think of heavy stickers like Parent, Stahl, Collins and Burkett, the four leaders of the batting list, averaging less than .200. This tells the story of defeat as plainly as anything could be printed. When the table is analyzed it is easily seen that Freeman is the only regular that has been hitting the ball well. Selbach has only played three games, but he leads the whole team.

It was the same old story yesterday against the White Sox. Young pitched winning ball. He did not issue a pass and only allowed five hits. Only three of these were clean safeties. Yet in the sixth inning the Chicagos bunched two two-baggers and the deed was done.

The Champs, as usual, fell badly by the wayside. With Freeman on first base in the second inning, Grimshaw hit a ball that Davis would have eaten up had not he been running to cover second base on Freeman's steal. The swat went as a base hit, but no one could bring him home.

In the third, with two down, Selbach doubled to centre, but Collins was third out on a fly to Holmes. In the fourth Freeman led with a single to centre, but was out on Grimshaw's force. Then Ferris fanned and Grimshaw was caught a mile trying to steal on Ferris's third strike.

With one out in the sixth Collins got in a safe hit to left, but Freeman and Grimshaw were easy outs. After that not a Boston man saw first except when Ferris was passed in the seventh.

Hard Luck Says "Cy."

"It's hard luck" said Uncle Cy, "but I have seen the same thing before two or three times. The team used to hit well behind me, but the latter part of last year and all of this season they can't earn a run when I am in the box. I advise Collins to sign a minor league team and let it finish out the season in place of us fellows. I don't know what the matter is, but we can't seem to get there."

Collins paid a visit to Ban Johnson's office yesterday in response to an invitation by the president of the American League. Johnson told Collins to ginger up, that it was all foolishness for a team like the Bostons to be at the foot of the ladder and that all that was needed was a little Irish blood.

Collins took heart and did ginger up his men when they went out on the field, but their lack of hitting told; that was all there was to it. Collins played poorly in the field, but neither of his errors counted in the run getting. The Champs ought to win every game on their fielding and pitching, but they can't, simply because they are falling down badly with the stick. I have repeatedly called attention to this weakness, so it is an old story with the BOSTON AMERICAN readers.

At Detroit—Philadelphia, 5; Detroit, 2.
At St. Louis—Washington, 4; St. Louis, 2.

NOTES OF THE PLAYERS.

Mrs. Criger, who joined her husband here when the team arrived, is seriously ill at the Lexington Hotel.

Lee Tannehill, the brother of the Boston pitcher, made two lightning plays from third base that were hair-raisers.

Altrock had Ferris tabbed. He struck "Hobe" out twice and fouled him out another time.

Young had great speed. The games he has pitched this year have been almost perfect, and he deserves to have won them all.

The Champs are poor bunters. This was clearly shown in yesterday's game.

Selbach's two-base hit would have been good for a home run on Boston grounds. The outfield here is dead.

May Howard, the old-time queen of burlesque, was also present.

Bill Dinneen and "Lefty" White will probably be the opposing pitchers this afternoon.

The day was cold and raw and unfit for ball playing.

YALE PICKED TO WIN AT FRANKLIN FIELD

GREAT CROWD SEES FINALS IN THE INTER-COLLEGIATE ATHLETIC GAMES.

Special to the Boston American.

FRANKLIN FIELD, Philadelphia, May 27.—The finals in the intercollegiate field and track championships drew a record-breaking crowd to Franklin Field this afternoon, over 7,000 people being present when the first semi-final heat in the hundred-yard dash was called.

The unexpectedly good showing made by Cornell and the possibility of Yale being beaten out for first place added to the interest in the events, and with the perfect weather some heart-breaking finishes were looked for.

Yale Favorite.

Among the experts Yale is now conceded first place by a narrow margin, with Cornell, Harvard and Pennsylvania fighting it out for second place. The Quakers have lost a possible two points in Lloyd Jones, the miler, breaking a bone in his ankle just after the start of the half-mile race yesterday, but if Hyman wins the quarter from Dives of Harvard he will make up the loss.

Possible Winners.

In the light of yesterday's performances the following were the favorites for first place to-day:

Schick, of Harvard, in the 100 and 220-yard dashes; Dives, of Harvard, in the quarter; Parsons, of Yale, in the half-mile; Munson, of Cornell, in the mile; Hall, of Yale, in the two miles; Amsler, of Pennsylvania, in the 120 and 220-yard hurdles; Porter, of Cornell, in the shot-put; Cook, of Cornell, or Shevlin, of Yale, in the hammer throw; Moffit, of Penn, in the high jump; Webber, of Stevens, in the broad jump, and Jackson, of Cornell, in the pole vault.

BIKE RACES POSTPONED

The bicycle races scheduled to be held at Revere Track to-night have been postponed until Memorial Day on account of the inability of Moran and Walthour, two of the contestants in the main event, to arrive in the city until nearly midnight to-night. They missed their train in the Southern States and immediately wired McLean, the third contestant, that they would be unable to perform this evening.

The management of the track wishes to announce that entries for amateur events scheduled for to-night will be received by Frank Bemis of the Post until Monday noon. The entire card as arranged for to-night will be given on May 30.

SHARPE, HUB NATIONAL CLEVER OUTFIELDE

Of the new players on the Boston National team there is not one who is making a better impression than Sharpe, who is on duty in the right garden. Coming from an independent team and wholly lacking in major ball experience he is holding his own in the fast company as if it was natural for him. He has plenty of speed in his makeup and covers a lot of ground and has made some wonderful catches in his territory. At the bat he also shows confidence and is stinging the ball along with the veterans of the team.

WANT TO MEET NELSON IN HUB

Battling Nelson need not go to Philadelphia to get a six-round bout, as Mike (Twin) Sullivan is willing to take him on if any club will make the match. Twin is anxious to have the Chelsea Club negotiate for Joe Gans or Willie Lewis, as he will meet either boy, and the bout would be a big drawing card in the Hub.

Some of the local boys would like to have a real tryout with the Dane, even if his engagement with Britt demands that he avoid making matches over six rounds, and Twin is the first to offer to take him on for that distance.

SCHOOL FIELD GAMES TO-DAY

The Boston Interscholastic Athletic Association will hold its first annual outdoor track and field games on the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Field, Brookline, this afternoon.

HARVARD FRESHMEN IN AMERICAN HENLEY RACE

FINE WEATHE AND SMOOTH COURSE FOR REGETTA ON THE SCHUYLKILL RIVER.

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, May 27.—The third annual American Henley regatta was held on the Schuylkill river this afternoon and a more ideal day could not be imagined. The water was as smooth as a mill pond, absolutely no wind to bother the oarsmen, while a hot sun shed its rays and helped the rowers to loosen up their muscles.

All the crews arrived in Philadelphia last night except the Seawanhakas of New York and they came into town at an early hour this morning.

The events which caused most interest were the junior college eight-oared race, which had Yale, Cornell and Pennsylvania as contestants, and the eight-oared race for the Stewards cup. In this event there were only two crews entered, the University of Pennsylvania and the Vesper Boat Club, but it was the first time the latter had had a chance to meet a really good crew and the contest was expected to give a line on the eight which goes to England next month to compete in the Henley regatta.

The Harvard freshman eight and four were looked after by the Harvard Club of Philadelphia and housed by the Bachelors' Barge Club.

NATIONAL LEAGUE GROUNDS, Philadelphia, May 27.—The Boston Nationals played their last game of their two-day stand here this afternoon and are already looking forward to their return home, when they will have the Phillies on their own grounds for four straight games, two of which are to be played on Memorial Day. President Pulliam of the National League will go to Boston to witness the holiday games.

Local fans are at a loss to understand Boston's low rating in the pennant race. They are playing good ball apparently, but appear to be suffering from the same trouble as the Phillies—poor pitching.

In yesterday's game Fraser gave nine hits, seven bases on balls and hit two men by pitched ball—the remarkable part of the game being that the Phillies only secured three runs and had seventeen men left on bases.

This afternoon's contest promised to be a very different affair. The Phillies have made a habit of losing the last game of every series and naturally the Bostons were keyed up to the situation and hoped for a continuance of a system that would act so much in their favor.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX TELLS HOW TO MAKE YOURSELF LOVABLE

LIFE LOOKS JUST AS A PERSON MAKES IT LOOK.

Love for Others Will Induce in Them the Best Kind of Love for the Girl Who Is Considerate.

DO you want to be loved?

If you do, let me tell you that the quickest way to achieve that desirable distinction is to make yourself nice to everybody.

Make no exceptions.

Be sweet-tempered and obliging with your parents, your brothers and sisters, your friends, your employers and fellow workers—not omitting the office boy.

Office boys and small brothers come under the same heading and are great allies to have on your side—they can be very obliging if they like, and most exasperating if they don't.

Try and see the bright side of things, instead of the gloomy.

Don't be critical of other people.

There's always some good quality in everybody. If you can't find that quality and praise it, don't say anything about the person.

Laugh with people, but not at them. Few people can stand the test of ridicule.

Sympathy is a quality every woman should possess.

If you make it a habit to listen sympathetically to tales of joy or woe, as the case may be, you will never want for friends.

Try and draw out your girl and men friends so they always show to advantage.

So often I have heard people say: "I like to talk to Miss So-and-So; she always makes me feel as though I were showing to advantage."

There's a great knack in that, but it is one which may be cultivated if you put your mind on it.

Above all, be sweet with those in the home circle.

See if you can't lift a little of the burden off the shoulders of the tired mother, who has borne it so patiently and uncomplainingly all these years.

Don't you think it time that she rested a little?

From the hour that you were born until now there has never been a day that she would not have willingly laid down her life for you, were the sacrifice demanded of her.

Give her all the love and consideration and petting you can.

Do it now and save yourself an agony of regret after it is too late.

And you'll find that the father, who has toiled early and late in order that you should have comforts and education, won't object to a little petting.

Make him proud of his grown daughter.

Then there are the brothers and sisters.

It's a great thing to win the love and confidence of a brother.

It means much to him and much to you.

His love and respect for you will make him nice to other girls and make him want to know only nice girls and keep him in the straight path in many ways.

A good brother can do a great deal for a sister.

He can see that she meets the right kind of men and save her from many foolish little mistakes.

As for the younger sisters, you know you must stand as an example to them. Whatever you do they will think all right, so you must live up to your responsibility.

Perhaps, dear girlies, this all sounds like preaching; but if you can't do it all, try some of it.

The work may be hard, but the reward will be great.

There is nothing in the world like love, be it that of parent, lover or friend.

You can all have a chance at it, and it would be folly to neglect your chance.

Laugh with people, but not at them. Sympathy is a quality every woman should possess.

Advice to Anxious Sweethearts

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady and have admired a certain young gentleman for a long time. I come in contact with many of his intimate friends, but as yet have never been able to secure an introduction.

I know nothing of him personally, but I go to the same school and have never heard anything wrong about him. I wish to make a very favorable impression on him, so will not seek his acquaintance without a formal introduction. I do not care to ask his friends to introduce me to him.

PERPLEXED.

IF I were you I would let him take the first step, as he will have no respect for you if he thinks you are running after him. If he is anxious to meet you he will take steps to secure an introduction.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

For the past seven months I have been going with a young man, he calling at my home every Sunday evening and two or three times a week besides, but for the last two months we have not been going out, as he was out of employment. He told me last week he could not see me Sunday, as he had a business engagement, but upon going to an affair that evening I met him with a young lady. If he offers me an apology shall I accept it and remain friends only, or shall I ignore him entirely? He has given me to understand that he thought a good deal of me.

M. E. D.

IT is quite possible that he may be able to offer a satisfactory explanation of his conduct. If you see that he had no good excuse and was trying to slight you in any way drop the friendship. Do not waste your time on a man who cannot keep a position.

Simple Rules for Care of the Hands

THE charm of dainty white hands and slender, tapering fingers, tipped with rosy nails, is irresistible. A few minutes devoted daily to the cult of hand beauty, a little patience and a certain skill will soon bring its reward.

Don't be discouraged if the results are not immediately obtained, as it will take some time to put the fingers in proper shape if they have been long neglected.

Above all things, drastic treatment of the hands should be avoided. Hard rubbing, hard water, strong soaps and lotions, all tend to coarsen and injure the hands, and make the attainment of manual beauty more difficult.

Then the care bestowed must be continuous. It is worse than useless to systematically ill-treat the hands, allow their texture to become coarse, and the nails thick and neglected, and then, after an occasional ten minutes' vigorous manicuring, expect a dainty and pleasing result.

The first part of the process of manicure is the thorough cleansing of the hands.

A little good cold cream should be well rubbed into the hands and then a thick pair of gloves drawn on. Such gloves, made of chamois leather, will prevent the dirt from working its way into the skin and under the nails.

For washing very hot water should be rigorously avoided; its use reddens the skin and makes it coarse by the dilation of the pores.

Hard water should always be softened by boiling and allowing to cool to a suitable temperature or the addition of a few drops of tincture of benzoin before use. This liquid will soften and whiten the skin.

"The hand should be rested palm downward on the table."

"A little cold cream should be well rubbed in."

If the hands are scarcely soiled the use of soap may be avoided and a little fine oatmeal used instead.

Ordinarily oatmeal will serve this purpose, or a prepared oatmeal may be substituted if preferred. Even if soap is used, the addition of oatmeal to the water is desirable. A couple of tablespoonfuls of the powder may be tied up in a piece of muslin to form an oatmeal bag.

Dirt and dust collect very rapidly under the finger nails, and must be thoroughly removed. The ordinary scrubbing brush method is deplorable. It increases the space between the finger tips and the nails and offers a larger opening for the entrance of fresh dirt. The inner surface of the nail also tends to become rough, and so attracts more dirt.

A better way is to cut a lemon in half and rub the finger-tips over the cut surface and down into the pulp. The lemon juice runs under and over the nails, removing stains and extracting the dirt. The finger-tips may at the same time be dipped in and out of a warm solution of soapy and softened water.

Then, should the nail brush be essential, a soft brush with pliable bristles must be selected. The hand should be rested palm downward on the table or washstand, and the brush, saturated with soapy water, drawn backward and forward over the nails.

The final dip into cold water enables the hands to regain easily an equable temperature, and closes the pores, making the entrance of dirt more difficult, so the hands remain clean for a much longer period.

Hearst's Boston American Pattern

A DAINTY GOWN

No. 2,830—The small girl needs a more extensive although not as elaborate a wardrobe as her elder sister, for it takes many frocks to keep the little maid always neatly and attractively gowned. These frocks can have some simple ornamentation, but the plainer they are kept the more comfortable will the small wearer be. The skirt of the pattern shown hangs in soft, full folds from the yoke, which can be plain or tucked, or striped with Valenciennes and needlework. A bertha edged with lace trims the waist, half concealing the short puff sleeves. A dimity in rosebud pattern is suggested for Summer wear, while cashmere, challis or pongee will be appropriate for the Spring months. For medium size the material required is 2¼ yards 36 inches wide.

"AND it is a painful task, Mr. Blenheim," said George Lang. "Don't apologize. I can't quite explain things, but somehow I feel that there is something wrong—very wrong, indeed. 'Pon my soul, Miss Mort, I feel I'd give my life if this thing hadn't happened."

The detectives regarded the ex-Lion King with undisguised amazement. That any man on the brink of starvation, a performer in a second-rate travelling circus, and a performer, too, out of employment, should give vent to such sentiments, was beyond the comprehension of that usually very astute individual. George Lang, the Lion King of Revelle's Circus and Menagerie, had in one sudden meteoric bound become one of the richest men in America, and he regretted it because he had conceived an altogether incomprehensible affection for the man who had wronged him, and kept him so long out of his rightful heritage.

Mr. Gerrard had come across many mysteries in the course of his long and varied career, but never such a one as this.

"Although I say it," said Mr. Blenheim solemnly—"and I must be honest, I think, Mr. Lang, or Mr. Holland, as I must now call you—the man who is dead, and who has been stricken down in this tragic and mysterious manner was much to be pitied. His temptation was something almost insurmountable."

"Mr. Blenheim," said George Lang, "in that I most cordially agree with you. No one shall say a word against him in my presence, or it will be the worse for him, mark my word." And it certainly looked as if it would, for George Lang was a very formidable specimen of humanity. "And I've just been telling Mr. Gerrard here," the Lion King continued, "that I am going to spare no money to solve the mystery of this abominable crime, and to hunt down the demon who perpetrated it. That is going to be

My Mission in Life.

"If all Mr. Blenheim tells me is true, I am going to be a rich man—one of the richest men in the country. Well, I'll spend every cent I've got, if it is necessary, in avenging the death of one of the best men who ever lived. There!"

"You must remember," said Mr. Blenheim, with gentle tolerance, "that you have a great dignity to sustain now."

"Hang the great dignity!" exclaimed the new Stephen Holland. "I don't give a brass doight for the position. I'm a rough diamond, I am, and so I shall be to the end of the chapter. But the money's quite another thing. Thank my lucky stars for that; and don't think I don't mean it when I say that, as far as I am concerned, I am going to spare no expense in order to avenge the death of that good and noble man, who was far better able and far more fitted to be called Stephen Holland than your very humble servant. Lord bless my soul, I was jolly near off my head a couple of days ago because I fixed up an agreement with a chap called Selwyn, a theatrical agent in Boston, for fifty dollars a week certain for six months. I was off my head, I was. And now—now I'm a millionaire and—oh, my head, it's almost splitting!" George Lang pressed his huge, muscular hands to his brows and groaned aloud.

Judith Mort could have shrieked. That this man could take the place of Stephen and be master of Holland Holme was a thing impossible of belief. It was monstrous, farcial. She turned away and burst out into a fit of hysterical laughter.

CHAPTER LXXXVII.

Echoes of the Past.

MRS. LANG was very ill at the lodgings in Church street, Mapella. The doctors were puzzled and several had been called in.

"A very severe nervous collapse," said Dr. Hatherly. "An immediate change of air. Switzerland for preference."

The other local doctor concurred, and the great Boston specialist who had come down to Mapella shook his head gravely.

"It's the brain," he said. "She has some great worry on her mind. Once we could remove the strain of it, she'll be all right. Change of air and scene and environment is all very well and quite excellent, but while that worry is there it will be no good."

"But what is the worry?" asked Dr. Hatherley.

The Boston specialist looked graver and shook his head again.

"That," he said, "is just the point."

"A shock," suggested the other local practitioner—"the shock of this sudden access of fortune."

"That," said the great Boston doctor, "can hardly have been a shock, since Mrs. Holland must have foreseen the possibility of this all her life. No, no; there is some other trouble. Of that I am most firmly convinced."

"One would think," said Dr. Hatherly, "that the old lady would be overjoyed at coming back into her own again, after all these years of exile, and taking up her rightful position as Mrs. Holland and seeing her son reinstated."

"It's the most extraordinary state of affairs," exclaimed the Boston specialist. "I am positively eaten up with curiosity. What does it all mean?"

Dr. Hatherly shrugged his shoulders.

"It baffles me," he said. "Here is Mrs. Holland living under an assumed name in the humblest of all possible ways, allowing her son to live the life he has been living—a lion tamer, forsooth. And he a man with one of the oldest names in the country and a man of really great wealth! You follow me?"

"Perfectly," said the specialist. "You are only voicing my thoughts. But knowing the facts as I do I can perhaps imagine a woman of superhumanly strong character, as Mrs. Holland undoubtedly is, living the life she has lived and allowing her son to live his while the father was alive. People do for pride. I am rapidly coming to the conclusion, Hatherly, that pride is the strongest incentive of the human will. Yes, I can even imagine, as of course we know was the case, Mrs. Lang going on her way and witnessing the introduction to the world by the old judge of this foundling boy as his son and heir, his education, his progress generally as Stephen Holland, for we must never allow ourselves to forget for a moment that she must have known the truth all the time, and she would have been more than human had she not followed every action of her husband's extraordinary career."

Dr. Hatherly, who had known the late judge for many years, and had the honor of being regarded by him more as a personal friend than as a medical adviser, nodded acquiescently.

"I see what you mean," he said. "Go on."

"What, I can't understand," said the Boston specialist, "is her attitude after her husband was dead. That is the point. And yet, as we know, she calmly witnessed the accession of this so-called Stephen Holland to the name and estates, knowing—as she must have known all the time—that he was an impostor. What possible motive can have prompted that extraordinary thing? I confess I cannot understand it. And mark you, Hatherly, she met him, too, met the impostor and spoke to him, accepted services from him, allowed her son, the real Stephen Holland, to accept patronage from the man who was usurping his place. 'Pon my soul, Hatherly, it beats anything I have ever heard of, or imagined."

"And," said Dr. Hatherly, "see what happens. As soon as the truth is out, she practically collapses with grief and fear. And the truth does not come from her. No; but by the voluntary confession of the man who was robbing her son of his rightful place and position. One would think, at any rate, that she would be glad and relieved; instead of which she is, one might almost say, bereft of her reason at the loss of this impostor. His death, I admit, was terrible, and one's whole sympathy goes out to the man who, after all, was more sinned against than sinning."

"You are right. Why, one would almost think that the man we have known as Stephen Holland was her son, and the man we know to be her son was

"A Stranger to Her."

"By Jove!" exclaimed Hatherly, "you have hit the right nail on the head! That is exactly how it has struck me. Her delirious talk, her whole mental attitude, justify one in assuming that it really is so; and yet—pshaw! of course all that is sheer nonsense!"

This conversation of the two medical men was interrupted by the arrival of George Lang.

"Well, and how is the mother to-day?" he asked.

Dr. Hatherly shook his head.

"You must get her away," he said.

"That's what I want to do," said George; "but she won't go."

"You must take her against her will, then," said the specialist. "She must be moved from here instantly."

"I wanted her to go home this morning," said George, a little glumly; "but she wouldn't hear of it. She insists that she must stay here in the old rooms." He looked around him with a pleasant reminiscent smile. "Ah, and I don't so much wonder at it, either! I love 'em. We're plain and simple folks, you know," he added. "I can't get it into my head what's happened. It's all like a dream. Fancy it, doctor; I'm Stephen Holland of Holland Holme." His voice and expression were positively comic, and he pressed his great ungainly hands to his forehead, as if he were afraid that his throbbing brain would burst his skull asunder.

It was two days after the world had been electrified by the startling news of Stephen Holland's murder, and the still more startling news of the great confession. George had just returned from his second visit to Holland Holme. For the last two days he had been almost constantly with Mr. Blenheim and other lawyers, and his brain ached with their legal jargon and reeled beneath the complexities of the enormous position which had so unexpectedly been thrust upon him. He had spent hours with detectives. He had racked his brain for long-forgotten facts and incidents.

And all this time Mrs. Lang had been at the lodgings in Church street in a state verging very near delirium. Bella was her constant companion, though the aid of a hospital nurse had been obtained, and everything that money and medical skill could do was done.

This extraordinary

dated from the moment she had heard the news of Stephen's tragic death. George had rushed off for a doctor, met Mr. Blenheim in the street and learned the astounding news which the lawyer had to communicate. When he returned he had found his mother with Mr. Blenheim and Bella.

Then she had appeared outwardly calm and told the astonished young man that she and Mr. Blenheim had recognized each other; that later she would explain to him the reason of her silence and her actions of the past years.

George had been dazed. The thing was then, just as it was now, utterly incomprehensible.

He had turned to Bella for help, as it were, in his confusion.

Mrs. Lang saw her son's action.

"Yes," she said. "Bella knows everything."

"Then it is really true, mother?" he gasped.

The old lady bowed her head.

"The truth," she said, "has come at last."

Then there had been congratulations, questioning and cross-questioning, in all of which they seemed to have suddenly forgotten the grim tragedy of Holland Holme. But there was one there who was thinking of nothing else; and when Mr. Blenheim had gone, after having made an appointment to meet George in the morning, and Bella had discreetly left mother and son together, the old lady broke down.

"He is dead!" she sobbed, hysterically—"he is dead! Oh, my son, my son!"

In vain did George try to comfort her. The old lady was inconsolable. The doctor prescribed certain things, and gave directions.

"The shock," he said, "has upset her and she will soon be all right again. Do not excite her. I will send Dr. Hatherly round, and come in again early in the morning."

Left alone with George, the old lady became quieter. It was as if she made a violent effort to control her feelings.

"Mother," said George, "tell me what this all means? Is it true? Can it possibly be true, or am I mad and dreaming all the time?"

"It is true; yes, it is true!" she cried.

"But why, then, aren't you glad?" he asked. "Think what this means, mother. You are Mrs. Holland, and I—I—— Oh, it is too impossible!"

"Oh, my son, my son!" groaned Mrs. Lang. "You will never be able to forgive me now—never!"

"Forgive you, mother!" he cried. "What is there to forgive? You must not talk like that. It makes me miserable."

She shook her head, and commenced to sob unrestrainedly.

"Don't talk about it now—don't, for pity's sake! He is dead—foully and cruelly murdered. Is this the punishment for my sin? Oh, it is cruel—cruel!"

"Mother, mine, what are you saying?"

She turned from him with a gesture of impatience.

"You don't understand. How can you? And now you will never understand. And he will never forgive—never! Oh, my son! My son!"

"George Lang was getting very alarmed. He had never seen his mother in this state before. Her words were unintelligible to him.

Don't, mother," he pleaded; "you must not talk like that!"

"Don't call me mother!" she retorted, with a sudden access of uncontrollable anger. "I am not worthy to be called your mother. Yes, George, I have wronged you too; I have wronged you, perhaps, as much as I have wronged him."

"Good gracious, my dear mother!" exclaimed George. "I wish you'd talk sense."

"Forgive me, George," she sobbed.

"Forgive you? Of course I forgive you; but I haven't nothing to forgive."

"If you only knew!" sobbed the distracted and disconsolate old lady.

DOUGLAS SAYS HE WILL NOT BE A CANDIDATE

Governor Announces His Decision in Letter to State Chairman Flaherty.

SAYS DECISION IS FINAL

Governor Douglas has announced that he will not be a candidate for re-election. his announcement was made in the form of a letter to Chairman John J. Flaherty of the Democratic Central Committee and created a sensation in political circles.

After his wonderful triumph last Fall, winning the highest office in the State by an overwhelming majority and leading his party to success for the first time since 1893, it was generally hoped that he would stand for another term in the gubernatorial chair. Republicans and Democrats alike admit that he is the strongest Democrat in the State and that he could win at the polls next Fall more easily than any other candidate on either side.

The Governor declares his decision is final. His letter is a clear and concise statement of his position. The text of the letter follows:

The Letter in Full.

Mr. John J. Flaherty, Chairman Democratic State Central Committee,
Gloucester, Mass.:

Dear Sir—In order that the coming campaign of our party in this State may be facilitated, I deem it my duty to inform you that I shall not again be a candidate for the nomination of Governor.

This decision has been reached after careful consideration, and I feel that in justice to myself I must be allowed to retire at the close of the present term.

I have no taste for office-holding, much preferring my business and a quiet home life to the constant strain incident to public responsibilities.

Last fall, when there seemed little probability of success for our ticket, I consented to the use of my name as a candidate for the office of Governor. On a tariff reform and reciprocity platform I made the canvass for my party and triumphed at the polls.

Since my inauguration as Governor I have earnestly endeavored to serve the interests of the whole people, and I shall continue to do so until the end of my term.

Assuring you of the continued interest in the welfare of our party, I remain, yours truly,

WILLIAM L. DOUGLAS.

Thayer's Name Heard.

When the news of the Governor's decision reached the legislative halls at the State House shortly before the close of the session it created a sensation among the members. Immediately the political leaders began to wonder and ask who would be his successor as the candidate of the party. Ex-Congressman Joseph R. Thayer's name was heard most prominently, although for the most part the Democrats were wary about expressing themselves publicly at so early a date.

Governor Douglas has given the State a non-political administration. Some of his appointments have not pleased the politicians, but criticism of his acts has in no way moved him. He has been in good accord with the Legislature, only one of his vetoes having been over-ridden by the lawmakers. Heads of departments under him are warm in their praise of the business-like way in which administrative matters have been handled and the dispatch with which disposition has been made of routine work.

TREASURER IS SHORT $4,200

COTTAGE CITY, May 27.—Because of his accommodation to friends and relatives Town Treasurer Zenas D. Linton faces a shortage of $4,200 in his accounts, $2,500 of which he has made up from his personal funds. The rest he has promised to refund. Although there is a nominal balance of $6,000 in the treasury, only $1,800 is actually on hand, Mr. Linton having lent $4,200 to friends on personal notes and real estate.

To Judge Eldridge, a nephew by marriage, and who has been a town official and chairman of the Board of Selectmen, Mr Linton has advanced $2,400. The judge is bitterly scored by the people of the town, though nothing but kindly words are heard for Mr. Linton.

15-YEAR-OLD GIRL ELOPES

CLINTON, May 27.—Although only fifteen years old and having just left school, Miss Lilian Ware has eloped with Hugh Maginnis, seven years her senior, and was married to him by the Rev. Charles E. Spaulding, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Fitchburg. The mother of the bride is prostrated by her daughter's act, but the couple have been forgiven.

As they returned from their wedding they were met by Mr. Ware, who endeavored to persuade his daughter to return home. When she determined to remain with her husband, however, her father acquiesced. He says that he will take no further action in the matter.

FINED A KISS; PAID PROMPTLY

This is the record entered in Justice Mayer's Court. Augusta is a landlady and Andrew is evidently her star boarder. They quarrelled first over their sentimental attachment, and then Andrew began throwing vocal bricks at the cuisine. He ridiculed the prunes and other things. There was a double arrest. Their attorney asked for a suspension of sentence, but was overruled. The kiss was given Nelson by Mrs. Benson at once.

CLARA FLORENCE MARSHALL

THIS LITTLE GIRL WANTS A GOOD HOME.

She Is Bright and Can Read, but Father Is Dead and Mother's Love Asks for Care.

What childless couple in Boston or New England would like to have a really very pretty four-year-old girl, who is so bright that she can already read intelligently all of the first primer in the public schools?

The BOSTON AMERICAN can tell them where there is such a little girl who needs a good home. Of course, the couple need not necessarily have no children—they may have any number and want one more, especially a little girl like this one.

Her name is Clara Florence Marshall and she was born in Providence four years ago this month. She is now at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Isaiah Marshall, at No. 10 Bromley Park, Roxbury. Mrs. Marshall has had the child since she was nine days old. The child's father is dead and her mother was unable to take care of her.

The Marshalls formerly lived at Providence, but moved to this city with the hope that Mrs. Marshall could get employment, the husband being an invalid. This she has been unable to do and is unable to take care of the little girl as she should be cared for.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall appeal through the BOSTON AMERICAN to some family who can offer the child the home she deserves. It is desired especially that the little girl be given a good education. Mrs. Marshall said:

"You can depend on it that I would not allow the dear girl to leave me if I could properly care for her and give her the education she ought to have. She has a bright future if some good, kind person will only take her in hand. It is hard to part with her, but it is my love for her that prompts it. I will sacrifice the pleasure of having her with me if I am assured that she will be properly cared for."

WOMEN MAKE EASY ESCAPE FROM DANVERS

Two Insane Asylum Inmates Get Out of Second Story with Blanket Ropes.

ONE CAN'T BE FOUND

DANVERS, May 27.—Following closely upon the escape of Miss Grace Darby from the Taunton Insane Asylum comes the easy escape of two inmates of the Danvers Insane Asylum. While the night watchman was supposed to be on guard, to prevent just such escapes, Mrs. Mary Burns and Mrs. Eleanor MacCormick escaped from a second story window of the woman's ward, and passed through the asylum grounds unnoticed.

The Burns woman has given herself up to the Lynn police, but all efforts to find Mrs. MacCormick have failed. She is thought to be staying with some one at Oak Island Grove of Revere Beach, as a woman answering her description left a bundle containing clothing with Charles H. Goodwin at his camp at Oak Island Grove, saying she would return for it.

The two women escaped in the easiest possible manner. They tied several blankets together and slid down the blanket rope to a porch. From the porch they stepped into a laundry room and then walked out the door to the grounds, easily making the street.

The watchman's quarters are in the part of the asylum through which the women passed in making their escape, and former attaches say they do not see how the women could possibly have gone through the apartments without making a noise.

When the Burns woman gave herself up in Lynn she told the police how she had made her escape, and asked to be sent back to the asylum.

"I wouldn't have tried to escape only Mrs. MacCormick pleaded with me," said Mrs. Burns. "I can't complain of the treatment there. I'm sorry I ran away. I'm footsore and weary with the long walk we had.

"Mrs. MacCormack fell when she got out of the window, and she cut her head badly. It's a wonder we didn't wake up some of the nurses and watchmen. No, I don't know where Mrs. MacCormick is."

The bundle which the mysterious woman left with Mr. Goodwin at Oak Island Grove contained a blue wrapper, a coarse cotton undergarment, two aprons, a spool of thread and a piece of soap. It was left by a woman who asked Mr. Goodwin where she could obtain food and lodging. He referred her to a nearby house. He said the woman was about thirty-eight years of age, of rather rough countenance, and had a shifty expression in her eyes. She wore a black golf cape, dark skirt and black straw hat. This description answers that of Mrs. MacCormick. All efforts to find here at Revere have failed, however.

LOVED FREEDOM MORE THAN $25

When the case of the man who told the police to call him John Smith or any other name they desired, but who is believed to be a commissioned officer of the United States Artillery Corps, and who was arrested at the Parker House last night after a rough and tumble fight, was called in the Municipal Court to-day, no one appeared. Default was entered against him and the $25 which a friend had put up for bail was forfeited.

It is said that the man was too strenuous in ordering drinks at the hotel bar and was finally deposited on the sidewalk, after giving the porter who had charge of the ejection cause to remember him for some time.

LIME BURNERS' STRIKE IS ENDED

ROCKLAND, Me., May 27.—Howard H. Caldwell, first general vice-president of the I. L. U., has sumed charge of the lime burners' strike.

After a conference with the Lime Syndicate, which refused the strikers' demand for $2 a day, a meeting of the strikers was held and voted not to return unless the $2 was granted.

At a conference between Mr. Caldwell and the independent burners a settlement was made and the men will return at once. This will effect about forty men.

CLERK MISSING; $5,000 SHORT

ALBANY, N. Y., May 27.—The Albany police have notified the police departments of practically every city in the country to be on the lookout for Philip Reid, confidential clerk to Proprietor Murphy of the New Kenmore Hotel in this city, who has been missing since Thursday. An examination of Reid's accounts shows a shortage of about $5,000.

DR. DIXON TO PREACH ABROAD

The Rev. A. C. Dixon of the Ruggles Street Baptist Church sailed from New York to-day for Liverpool on the steamer Minnetonka. Dr. Dixon will remain abroad four months, spending most of his time in the British Isles, France and Switzerland. He will preach in Westminster Chapel, supplying the place of the renowned Baptist preacher, Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, on the four Sundays in July. Dr. Dixon also purposes to study the marvellous Welsh revival at first hand. He will return to Boston in September. During his absence his pulpit will be occupied by different Baptist clergymen in Boston and vicinity.

LEGISLATORS END SESSION, THREE RECORDS

Shortest Time, Biggest Appropriation and Highest Tax Its Work.

WORK AND PLAY AT END

Three records had been established by the Great and General Court of Massachusetts when Secretary of State Olin announced the prorogation message from Governor Douglas at exactly 6:12 o'clock last night. They were not all unmixed blessings, but they were records of long standing that went by the board.

The session of 1905 was the shortest in twenty-four years, had declared the highest State tax in thirty-eight years, and had appropriated more money than had been appropriated by any Legislature of the State since the Civil War.

When Secretary Olin entered the legislative hall he was greeted with a storm of cheers, for the members were glad that their duties were done and that they could return to their homes and various callings. After the message was read Secretary Olin withdrew in the midst of more cheers.

As soon as the session was declared adjourned without date, the members gathered in front of the arena, and with two bands to furnish accompaniments sang "Auld Lang Syne" and "Home, Sweet Home." Then there were the hurried farewells, and the legislators of Massachusetts hurried for the railway stations and to their homes.

Last Work of Branches.

Work and play marked the concluding hours of the session. A negro minstrel troupe was kept employed, and as a relaxation from the serious trend of the black-face jokes the odds and ends of business were disposed of.

The House passed the Cambridge subway bill and steam boiler inspection bill. They were sent to Governor Douglas and endorsed.

The Governor's docket was cleaned by the signing of the Winthrop water bill. The Senate's last work was its refusal to attempt to pass the Schofield bounty bill over the Governor's veto.

The Senate paid their respects to the officers and attendants of the Senate by presenting them with gifts. The House did likewise.

Gifts to Officers.

In the Senate, President Dana received a gold watch, Chaplain Horton a gold-headed cane, Clerk Coolidge a Turkish rug, Assistant Clerk Sanger a travelling bag and Doorkeeper Davis and the pages sums of money.

Speaker Frothingham was given a clock, Clerk Kimball a rug, the chaplain a cut glass bowl, Sergeant-at-Arms Remington a silver-headed stick, Postmaster Beatty a travelling bag and the pages stickpins.

2 PATROLMEN BEFORE BOARD

After hearing the evidence in the charges preferred against Patrolmen Thomas H. Vincent and Joseph M. Connor by Captain O'Lalor of the Dedham street station, the police commissioners have taken the case under advisement and will make known their decision within a few days.

The charges grew out of the loss of two society pins which were taken by Patrolman Vincent from the room of Frederick M. Mellen, who committed suicide at No. 719A Tremont street, and by him turned over to Patrolman Connor. The houses of the two officers were searched for the lost pins by Sergeants Driscoll and Goff of the East Dedham street station.

Chairman Cole of the Board said after the hearing that the commissioners did not seriously regard the charges against the two patrolmen.

It is understood that there will be charges filed against the two sergeants for using undue authority in searching the houses of the patrolmen.

LOCKED IN; NEARLY DIE

Three Hyde Park children narrowly escaped death from suffocation in a closet in an unoccupied house on Brainard street, Hyde Park, while the entire neighborhood was searching for them.

The children are Marjorie, aged four, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Ibeacke; Paul, aged six, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert S. Warren, and May, aged four, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dowle.

They were found huddled together in a closet so small that they could hardly sit down. On the outside of the door of the closet was a latch, which had sprung. They were on the point of suffocation.

PLOT TO KILL KING ALFONSO

PARIS, May 27.—Seven anarchists were arrested here on their arrival from Spain. Five of them refused to give any information about themselves. The other two asserted that they had come to Paris with the intention of assassinating King Alfonso during his visit.

MINSTRELS FOR S. OF V.

A clever minstrel show was given in Watertown town hall by young men and women, for the benefit of Camp 29, Sons of Veterans, Fife and Drum Corps. Miss Mae Harrison was interlocutor. F. A. Mills, W. H. Arnold and J. Harry Kent were bones, and the tambos were Al. O'Brien, J. A. Utting and W. S. Fisher. Several original skits were introduced.

Gas Bill passed as a result of the BOSTON AMERICAN'S agitation for cheaper gas. Provides for capitalization of Consolidated Gas Companies at about $15,000,000 instead of about $26,000,000. Grants Boston consumers ninety-cent gas.

Railroad Eminent Domain Bill defeated. This bill provided that railroads should have greater power in appropriating private propety by application of the law of eminent domain. The bill was defeated through the efforts of rival railroad interests.

Weavers' Specification Bill passed. Reduces amount by which actual length may exceed intended length of cut of cloth.

State militia laws changed to conform to the Federal laws on the subject.

CUTS LAWYERS' BILLS.

The Committee on Finance of the Cambridge City Council has voted to cut $200 from the bill of each of the lawyers engaged in the Weeks-Scott controversy. Mayor Daly's lawyer charged $650, and counsel for Mr. Weeks and Mr. Scott charged $500 each.

Wealthy Pittsburger's Wife Has Undergone Operation in Hospital—Husband Anxious.

HOPE FOR RECONCILIATION

NEW YORK, May 27.—That the rumored reconciliation between Laurence C. Phipps, the wealthy Pittsburger, and his wife, Genevieve Chanler Phipps, whose family troubles have been before the public for many months, may be hastened by reason of a serious illness and operation performed on Mrs. Phipps in this city and just made known to-day is the hope of the friends of both.

Mr. Phipps is reported to have expressed solicitation for his wife and to have inquired repeatedly about her since she came to the General Memorial Hospital at One Hundred and Sixth street and Central Park west two weeks ago. She is said to have been suffering from a malignant growth on the neck. The operation was performed by Dr. H. C. Coe, the hospital surgeon.

An Interesting Case —and a NEW One

Every Man and Woman in the Country Will Discuss This Matter—Many Will Be the Conflicts of Opinion

The New York Legislature passed—very quietly—a bill to make a certain child legitimate.

The father and mother of the child are not married—could not be, as the father has a wife living.

The bill was vetoed by the Governor and the veto denounces vigorously the action of the Legislature.

Governor Higgins says very strongly what he thinks—that is pleasant, for milk-and-water statesmen are as tiresome as they are numerous.

The Governor declares that to make the child legitimate would be an insult to the man's wife; he says also that such an act would be putting a premium upon a sort of polygamy.

No such case has come up in the public news within recent times, we believe. It is safe to say that endless discussion will follow the action of the Legislature and the Governor's veto.

We do not propose at this moment to express any positive opinion.

Which has most at stake—the child, the child's mother or the father's lawful wife?

Undoubtedly the child, we should say.

Her entire life may be clouded by the sad notoriety now forced upon her in childhood—and for no fault of her own. It is a question whether any act of the Legislature could do her any possible good. If it could do her any good, it might seem harsh to deny her relief. But could special bills be passed for ALL such children? Hardly. And would it be right to single out one unfortunate child for specially considerate treatment?

The wife, presumably, would resent the suggested legislation that would make it possible for her husband to have legitimate children outside of his home.

We say PRESUMABLY, but perhaps the wife's temperament is a little out of the ordinary rut of jealousy or revenge. Perhaps she would say:

"If you CAN do anything for the helpless, innocent child, do it. I do not want to spoil her life. To make another woman's life miserable would not atone for my sorrow."

There will be much quoting of the Bible by clergymen and by others acquainted with the trusty Concordance.

We shall be told that the sins of the father must be visited upon the children.

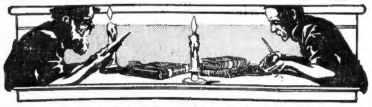
But we can reply that a later and higher authority than that of the Old Testament said: "Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones," and warned men, further, that they might better have a millstone hung around their necks and be thrown in the depths of the sea than to harm any child.

A REAL discussion of this matter would go deep and carry one far back into history. It is but a short time, relatively, since all children bore their mother's names. Man's accumulation of property plus vanity at last made him name his children for himself. An uncle used to be considered a closer relation than a father because he was the mother's brother. The mother was allowed to dominate absolutely in all rights over the child—the father was considered somewhat in the light of an accidental outsider.

This is not the proper place, however, for a REAL discussion of the issues involved in the remarkable case that we mention. It is superficially interesting because it brings up in official form the rights of children, of mothers and of wives—with an energetic decision thereon by the Governor of a great State.

We are inclined to think that a majority of men and women will approve Governor Higgins's veto. Whether we approve it or not, we shall not say at this time. Let readers discuss it for themselves.

Little Editorials from the People



"A TIMELY EDITORIAL."

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

All good people should thank you for your timely and remarkably strong editorial in the BOSTON AMERICAN entitled "Nan Patterson on the Stage." A woman of Nan Patterson's character with the crime of murder still hanging over her should not be exploited before the public. I firmly believe the time is not far distant when theatrical managers will be prohibited from catering in such a manner to the tastes of the morbid and vicious. The American stage needs, sadly, to be elevated. I would suggest that the readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN cut out the above mentioned editorial and paste it in their scrapbooks. I also hope you will give us more editorials on this very important subject.

LIKES THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S EDITORIALS

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I have been a constant reader of your excellent paper since its first issue. The part I prize most highly is the editorial. I always read that first, for I find in it so much sound, logical reasoning, so much kindly, humane feeling for all. From my heart I reach my hand to you, wishing you all success and happiness.

Boston. ELSIE C. SARGENT.

DIVIDENDS BEFORE LABOR

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I wish you would tell in some future editorial why it is that dividends must be paid before human beings can be paid a sufficient price for labor that will enable them to live and have the ordinary comforts of life. In other words, which should first be considered, dividends or hearts, feelings, comforts. The AMERICAN is the only paper in Boston to which such a question can be submitted for an answer. I would rather have the editorials and cartoons in the AMERICAN as educators than all the other Boston papers combined. Long may it live and prosper.

"A PERFECT ILLUSTRATION"

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Permit me to congratulate you on the perfect illustration of "private ownership" in the United States to-day. It will go a long way to aid in again establishing in America American liberty. With respect,

HANS CHRISTIANSEN.

SAYS GAMBLING IS THIEVING

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I am unaware of the AMERICAN ever doing a better stroke of business for the young and thoughtless middle-aged, than by its recently published articles and pictures on race tracks. Gambling is thievery, no matter under what guise it masks. Your rich who live off people who are absolutely child-like in their innocence of the tricks and dodges of what ought to be a noble pastime are beneath contempt, and in my very humble opinion meaner than any pickpocket.

Does any person who bets on horses imagine that the crowds of touts and parasites who attend these meetings go there for fun or philanthrophy? Oh, no, they are there knowing well fools and their money are soon parted. Rarely is gambling condemned because it is a kind of action by which pleasure is obtained at the cost of another's pain. For the happiness of the winner involves the misery of the loser. This kind of action is essentially anti-social, it sears the sympathies and produces a general deterioration of character and conduct.

Governor Higgins Did the Right Thing

By Beatrice Fairfax

GOVERNOR HIGGINS of New York has vetoed the bill to legitimize little Queenie Barker.

His action has raised a storm of criticism, both favorable and otherwise, on the course he has taken.

His argument is that to pass the bill would be an insult to every faithful wife and to womanhood itself.

It is the old, old story of visiting the sins of the father upon the children.

This man and woman sinned, and a little innocent girl child is to reap the whirlwind.

True, they have sought to make reparation.

But to condone and legalize their wrongdoing would be to open wide the gates of condonement for many another's sinning.

The charitable world that is ready to see the child legitimized should be ready to ignore the stain on her name.

The only reparation the mother and father can make her will be to bring her up in surroundings that will help her to be a pure, good woman.

Her treatment by the world should depend on her own attitude toward it.

If she is taught to realize her obligations toward her fellow beings there will be no question of her fellow beings living up to their obligations to her.

Public opinion is, after all, but a vast clearing house of social rights and wrongs in the highest sense of the word.

To legitimize a child born out of wedlock would be to lower the standard of the purest, holiest institutions on earth—wifehood and motherhood.

If we were to look at it only from little Queenie's side, our natural inclination would be to say, "By all means do everything possible to give her a name of her own."

But justice to womankind demands that many should not be sacrificed for one.

The father of Queenie has a wife.

Her rights as a wife must be considered before Queenie's rights as a child.

Perhaps no greater object lesson than this miserable scandal could be set before the eyes of the young women of this country.

For neglect of moral law this innocent child has to suffer.

Girls, when you are tempted to stray from the paths of right and honor, just pause and remember that you may not be the only ones to suffer.

No one has any right to blight the life of a fellow being, especially of a little innocent child.

The path of life is not any too easy for women, even in the best of circumstances.

How much worse is it, then, for the woman who is handicapped from her birth by the sins of her parents?

Governor Higgins has done his duty.

Those in high position must sanction the laws that stand for right and rectitude.

Not a mother in the country but whose heart would ache for poor little Queenie, and at the same time not a mother but would jealously rebel should a child born out of wedlock be given the same honor and privileges that her own children enjoy.

Every true woman looks forward to wifehood and motherhood as the crowning glories of her life.

Should these holy institutions be ignored there is no knowing what the effect on the general morals of the country might be.

Dinkelspiel's Hint To the President

By George V. Hobart

I SEE it vare my olt college chump President Roozlefelt is vittling his lead pencil und getting all retty to wrote a book abouid der shootings of bears und Rocky Mountain tigers und Colorado Madura lions in der vild und vooly Vest, yet.

Dis vas a nice idea, but I dink der book vould throw ould much more entertainment if it also gave a chapter from der point of view of der animals demselfs.

I haf in my possessionment a few pages from der diary kept py a Rocky Mountain lion during der last wisit der President made to der vild vooda vich should be in der new book.

At any rate, der President should put dis diary in his book somevare in der appendix, so it could be cut ould if necessary.

Dis is it, yet:

Lone Tree Siding, Last Veek.

Dear Diary—I vunder vot is cameing over me? I feel such a nervousness venever I look down der long road dot leads to vare der hated train stops. Der paw I write mit trembles in der balance. Ould on der trail dis morning I met up mit a chack rabbit und ve holded a short conversationing. He vas very nervous also. I vas hungry at der time, so I added his nervousness to mine. But I doan'd feel better. Perhaps der chack rabbit gave der indigestionings. Vot, oh! vot is in der air?

Der coyotes all met in convention assembled yesterday und passed resolutions condemning der lead trust und der gunpowder trust. Vun old coyote got up and set dot he hat a hunch dot something bitter vas going to happen because last night he dreamed he had a tooth pulled.

All our part of der mountain is getting eggseited. Ve seem to be receiving vireless messages from der Coroner, most of dem sent collect.

Monday, Vash Day.

My vife, Mrs. R. M. Lion, is so succumbed mit nervous palpitationings dot she cannot put ould der veek's vash. She is roaring, I vas roaring, der leedle vuns vas roaring, and der whole household is in an uproar. A leedle vile ago I heard woices in der mountains. I vent ould to see der woices, but I only found a silence. Vot does it all mean? To-day I saw a buzzard in der air. Der buzzard yelled at me: "Ha, ha! Soon dare vill be something didding, something didding!" Den he looked at me mit his eyes full mit appetite und flew avay. Growler Chunior is still unter der bed shooking mit a terror. Surely dare is somedings in der air besides der buzzards.

Eferyvare in der mountains der timid animals vas building cyclone cellars, und a olt krizzly bear py der name of Uncle Noah has been vorking for two veeks on a ark.

Ve all feel dot someding terrible is cameing off, but nobody has der heart to suspect der truth.

Deep in my boozum I remember der awful bunch dot came ould of der East four or fife years ago, und my conscience tells me dot now is cameing a similiarity bunch.

Ach! voe is me! Voe is me!

Home, Yesterday.

It is all off. I saw it to-day. Vill I efer forget der sight? I vas valking down Palisade avenue, near Eighty-first street, ven I met it. Now I understant vy I vas so nervous. My leedle boy, Growler Chunior, vas mit me. "Look, papa," he set to me, "dare is it!" I looked. I saw a slouch hat pulled down ofer der most open face I efer vitnessed.

I saw such a smile as ven der vorld is getting retty to laugh at der daybreak. I saw in der eyes vinking behint a pair of show vindows such a look of determination vich made my flesh full mit goose fedders, und I trembled from pit to dome like a leaf in our dining room table.

At fairst I thought I vould faint, but I changed my mind and lost my conscience.

At dot moment der face underneath der slouch hat smiled more dentistfully und aimed a gun at me.

Ach, Himmel! der sensation of hafing a gun aimed at me for der fairst time mit dot determined slouch hat behind der trigger!

For a moment somebody seemed to throw a blanket ofer der sun und I could see nuddings anyvare eggscept dot broad vite smile at der apex of der gun.

A thousand thoughts rushed through my brainery in der tvinkling of a eyevinker. I remembered der harsh vords I hat spoke to Mrs. Lion only dot morning because der bear steak was burned at breakfast. I remembered how cruel I vas to der last rattlesnake dot tried to svallow Gilbert J. Lion, our youngest son, und how I put der boots to dem young coyotes dot tried to kidnap Isabella Lion, our baby daughter.

Den vile my sins vas passing in review before me der man unterneath dot awful slouch hat pulled der trigger und der next moment I laughed, laughed lionfully, full mit der choy of living because der man nefer touched me.

But I felt so sorry for a tree abould half a mile away to der north.

Den I sent my son Growler home in a hurry in case der slouch hatter vould aim at der tree und maybe hit der leddle fellow.

Den I moved thoughtfully in der direction of der slouch hat, und der slouch hat begun to move thoughtfully in der direction of Hartford, Conn.

I began to move faster und der slouch hatter occupied der same tactics.

Der last I saw of him he vas rolling down der side of der mountain dictating his sensations to his secretary. So I vent home und locked all der doors.

For a veek Mrs. Lion und I vas afraid to quarrel above a visper because ve knew dot slouch hat vas back in der mountains mit reinforcings, but all he got vas olt Uncle Noah Bear, vich vas too stubborn to stop vorking on his ark and go in der cyclone cellar.

It vould tiggle me to haf der President use dis in his book because here ve haf it from der Lion's point of view, und dare must be two sides to efery story.

Yours mit luff, D. DINKELSPIEL.
